Population Increase Threat To Food Supply

What's the gravest threat to America in the "population explos-ion?" the farmer from succeeding.

One is the rapidly increasing

Our abuity to build enough nouses, highways, or public buildings is questionable if our burgeoning population reaches its predicted peak. But there is a more dangerous and basic threat. What are Americans going to eat if population expansion exceeds agricultural productive capacity?

Conservative estimates indicate Either situation poses the threat farmers will have to provide 36 of famine in this land of plenty. per cent more eggs, 61 per cent more broilers, and 56 per cent more meat animals for Americans in 1975 to enjoy the same high standard of living as today. They will have to produce 60 per cent more fruits and vegetables, 48 per cent more dairy products, and 26 per cent more grain and potatoes.

So far, farmers have been able to keep up and, in some cases, get ahead. Whether they can continue to keep pace with population, however, remains to be seen.

Farm efficiency has improved more in the past 18 years than in the preceding 120 but, like the golfer who had whittled his score down to the low 80's, improvement ost of his necessities for produc ing a crop. When it is no longer profitable to farm, the farmer will move to the city.

by attacks on the farmer. Congress could hamstring his efforts for increased efficiency.

The ASC County and Communi ty committees, with the aid of other agricultural agencies and local business representatives, are now formulating the 1961 Agricul-tural Conservation County Program which will again provide the opportunity for Government assist ance in the way of cost-sharing for conservation practices designed to conserve the soil, water and woodland resources on the more than 2,500 farms in the county. Open ators of these farms will be given the opportunity to file requests for this assistance for the needed practices on their farms early in

GETS FIRST COPY.-In recognition of having been the first to suggest the printing of a North Carolina seafood cookbook, Henry Belk, right, editor of the Goldsboro News-Argus, is given-the first copy of the publication by Director William P. Saunders of the Department of Conservation and Development. The 50-page cookbook is available from the Public Information Office, Department of Conservation and Development, Raleigh, at 25 cents per copy. It is sent postpaid. The book is designed to stimulate interest in and increase the use of North Carolina's wide variety of seafoods
