Corey Will Speak At University Of N. C.

By FETE IVEY
Chapel Hill, N. C.—John Corey is equally at home writing about nudes, problem children, battlefields and the Bible. One of North Carolina's outstanding young educators, he's a former newspaper reporter and editor of a Tar Heel weekly. His column on public school children and their teacher-and-child relations appears in daily newspapers all over the United States.

Corey is a member of the faculty at Appalachian State Teachers College in Boone. He will deliver one of the main speeches at the opening session of the American College Public Relations Association regional meeting to be held at the University of North Carolina here Thursday, February 14.

Besides teaching educational psychology at Boone, Corey is alumni secretary, head of the News Bureau and a Danforth Fellow.

He won the American College Public Relations citation in 1960 for his nationally syndicated newspaper column "School and Your Child." He is now writing a book relating to schools and children, collaborating with Dr. Charles Foster, University of Florida and Dr. Stanley Eliam of Indiana University.

He's a native of Greenville, North Carolina, 36 years old, a graduate of Appalachian, with the M. A. degree also. He has studied at Sophia University in Tokyo, Japan; East Carolina College and Duke University.

Thursdays, Fridays Ski Days For Women

Tuesdays and Fridays will be ladies days at Blowing Rock Ski Lodge beginning Tuesday, February 12.

Though men will still be allowed on the three slopes at the ski resort, the womenfolk will have the advantage of a special "ladies day" rate package announced today by M. E. (Bill) Thalheimer, president of the lodge.

The package includes a free skiing lesson and a reduced "package" price for ski rental and admission to the slopes and tows.

Women who must come some distance to Dixie's newest ski area may also take advantage of the lodge's "ski-n-sleep" package already in effect. Mr. Thalheimer said. Under this plan skiers—male or female—get a motel room, double occupancy, and a day of skiing (including rentals) for $10.

Together the two plans offer a very reasonably priced winter sports outlet for women, Mr. Thalheimer said. Heretofore women—including those who pack golf courses on ladies days in the summer—have been confined to the bridge table for their winter recreation, Mr. Thalheimer said.

The ladies day package includes admission, rental of skis and the free lesson for $7. The standard weekday rate would be $9 for the admission and rental only.

Groups of 20 or more women may obtain even larger savings under group rates available by special arrangement, Mr. Thalheimer said.
