Notes And Comments

The neighbor who borrows should be willing to lend. Spring gardens will soon begin to stir the hopes of mankind. Sometimes wise men and women fall for fascinating hookum. The impulse to do good is worth while if the individual does good. A newspaper is not always what the first syllable of its name implies. No man has more pride than the man who insists that he has none. The man who believes street corner gossip thinks he has plenty of sense. It's rather peculiar but tolerance is a virtue that your adversary rarely has. Correct this sentence: "Never mind the bill, old man; take the money and have a good time. Well, we don't think anybody can blame the dyes for the boot-legging going on over the nation these days.

Washington News

Washington, D. C.—The recent shrimp boat flap shows again how volatile the Cuban situation is, why it is the Kennedy Administration's greatest source of worry. The most dangerous element is the chance some incident will emotionally inflame the people of the United States. Already some newspapers and politicians are demanding more forceful action by the President, when went to the brink last October and risked war with Russia. Further incidents will increase the pressure on the White House.

Some Democrats are convinced nothing the President can do will take Cuba out of the political arena and out of the 1964 political campaign. The Republicans, they feel, find it more promising to rehash the Bay of Pigs failure in 1961 and its results than to attack on any other line.

Thus the publicity, and the Administration's dilemma, of how far to go, and how, will likely remain throughout this year and next. That Moscow feared pressure in the United States was building up for stern action is taken as one reason for the blunt and tough speech recently delivered by Defense Minister Rodion Y. Malinovsky.

In his warning, Malinovsky said flatly if the United States attacked Cuba, Russia would come to Cuba's aid. He also said that the war would not be limited to Cuba, but would involve the United States itself. And he said Russia had more nuclear power than the United States.

These are tough, grim words and if this is indeed Soviet policy, any attack on Cuba might be a very serious affair. It should be noted in this connection that we are not prepared for nuclear war and that our cities are far more vulnerable than are Russia's industrial complexes.

Washington, however, looks upon Malinovsky's words as bluster and bluff. But no one can view them lightly, if there remains a chance he meant what he said and Russia is willing to back them up. And Nikita Khrushchev was a listener in the Palace of Congress to this speech, on Soviet Armed Forces Day.

Malinovsky's boast about bomb numbers contrasts to recent intelligence estimates making the rounds in the national capital. The prevailing view in Washington is that the United States has far more bombs than Russia and greater total destructive power. However, the Russians may well have the largest bombs. Their 100-megaton bomb may destroy all military and industrial targets in an area of several thousand square miles.

The sober fact which must be faced by the President, is that any action involving Cuba must take into consideration the possibility of a war with Russia. Even if this outcome is viewed as unlikely, it must be taken into account, for the Russians have specifically stated their intention to fight if Cuba is attacked.

To disregard this warning, when the consequences might be catastrophic, is impossible, and that is why the Cuban situation is keeping both the Pentagon and the White House constantly on edge.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk's new negotiations with the Soviets on Berlin is doing us no good with the Germans, who fear appeasement or concession, involving the rights of West Berliners.

The attitude of French President Charles DeGaulle, who opposes talks, seems a stronger one to many Germans, but Washington is going ahead with the negotiations. West Germany, already leaning toward France, is thus to be pushed a little further in that direction.

Only reluctantly does Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's government go along with the Rusk negotiations, which have now extended into the second year.

Representative John D. Dingell (D, Mich.) proposed legislation to increase the minimum benefit of $40 a month under the Social Security program to $75.

He said: "We all know that poverty hits the elderly harder than it does most other people, and that women are usually much more poorly provided for than men."
