Tells Of Fish Which Fetched Him $100 Prize

Jim Moore of Sarasota, Florida, and western North Carolina returned to Boone last week and told about the fish he didn't let get away.

Seems that a beer company in Florida turned loose 100 specially marked red fish off the Sarasota coast and offered $100 for each of the tagged swimmers.

Proving that a North Carolina Floridian can't be outdone, Mr. Moore snagged one of the prized fish, weighing 7½ pounds (give or take a few ounces).

Now a hundred dollars to the better and several degrees cooler, Mr. Moore and his wife are relaxing at their Yonahlossee home — telling fish tales, no less!

League Women Voters To Meet

Easier Than Ever To See North Carolina

New Roadways Make Areas Accessible

By MIRIAM RABB
(Travel Editor)

It is easier than ever to reach the scenery, history and resorts which make North Carolina a Variety Vacationland extending from the Atlantic Ocean to Eastern America's highest mountains.

A new section of the Blue Ridge Parkway climbs to 6,000 feet enroute to its junction with the Great Smoky Mountains National Park near Cherokee.

Skimming across the rolling Piedmont countryside to link up with the Parkway and other mountain routes is Interstate 40, already noted for its panoramic views of mountain ranges north of Asheville, "capital of the Land of the Sky."

On the coast, new roads and bridges combine with State automobile ferries to give access to seaside resorts and the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

As North Carolina observes the 300th anniversary of the Carolina Charter, Tercentenary celebrations from coast to mountains add historical interest to the vacation calendar.

In Raleigh, the State Legislative Building designed by Edward Durrell Stone and completed early this year is a brand new travel attraction sharing honors with the historic Capitol Building on the newly marked Capitol City Trail.

New in the Piedmont is 32,510-acre Lake Norman.

There are now 173 golf courses in North Carolina, of which more than 150 are played year around.

Four Seasons
North Carolina is a four-season vacationland, with most attractions and accommodations open all year, and others designed especially for spring through autumn or autumn through spring use. Seasons are being extended. For example, the famous winter resort of Pinehurst now has a hotel as well as one of its five 18-hole golf courses open through the summer. Many accommodations in the mountains and on the coast are now open 12 months in the year.

Open to visitors year 'round are Tryon Palace restoration at New Bern; the U.S.E. North Carolina Battleship Memorial at Wilmington; Old Salem in Winston-Salem; and State and National historic sites ranging from the birthplace of aviation to Revolutionary and Civil War battlefields.

Spring comes early to the Mid-South golf and riding resorts of the Sandhills and Thermal Belt, and to the Southeastern Coast with its fabulous gardens. Azaleas and other spring flowers bloom profusely throughout the Coastal Plain and Piedmont in April. As the surf bathing season begins at the beaches, spring climbs the Blue Ridge Divide and lingers until June on mile-high mountains.

Summer brings the greatest visitation to the coastal and mountain resorts. Specialties like Tweetsie Railroad, Ghost Mountain, Grandfather Mountain, and ocean fishing piers are open from spring through autumn. Over 50 summer camps for boys and girls are open from June through August. Three big outdoor dramas and three summer theatres reopen in June.

Fishing, enjoyed year around in most sections of North Carolina, booms in spring as channel bass and other salt water species are taken along the coast, the trout season begins in the mountains, and inland lake fishing is prime. Offshore fishing along the "Gamefish Junction" coast is at its best from May into November.

Autumn decorates North Carolina with brilliant foliage and marks the beginning of hunting seasons, statewide. October returns the winter resorts to the vacation spotlight. In early winter the ski slopes at Cataloochee Ranch in the Great Smokies and Blowing Rock in the Blue Ridge reopen. Autumn is enlivened by fairs and harvest festivals, unique among them the Cherokee Indian Fair in the Great Smokies. In December, the anniversary of Powered Flight is celebrated at Wright Memorial near Kitty Hawk.

Hunting for deer, bear, wild boar, upland game birds and waterfowl is enjoyed between October and March. Thanksgiving Day marks the beginning of the season for riding to hounds at Southern Pines, Tryon, Sedgfield, Charlotte and Raleigh.

In December, as sasanquas brighten the gardens of Eastern North Carolina, the World's Largest Living Christmas Tree glows with colored lights at Wilmington, and Moravian Candle Teas open the Yuletide in the 18th Century community of Old Salem.

Special Events

Every season has its full complement of sports contests, festivals and other events. Largest of the spring festivals are the North Carolina Azalea Festival at Wilmington in early April, and the Dare Coast Pirates Jamboree on the Outer Banks in late April and early May. Steeplechase racing and golf tournaments are spring specialties in the Mid-South resort areas of the Piedmont. In June, the blossoming of rhododendron in the "Land of the Sky" is celebrated with the North Carolina Rhododendron Festival atop Roan Mountain, site of the world's largest natural gardens of crimson-purple (Catawba) rhododendron. The 6,285-foot summit of Roan Mountain is one of the recreational areas in Pisgah National Forest.

Outdoor historical dramas open from late June through Labor Day week end are "The Lost Colony" at Manteo on the coast; "Unto These Hills" at Cherokee in the Great Smokies; and "Horn in the West" at Boone in the Blue Ridge. Summer theatres are at Flat Rock and Burnsville in the mountains; Charlotte and Tanglewood Park (near Winston-Salem) in the Piedmont.

On the fourth Sunday in June, thousands gather at Grandfather Mountain near Linville for the annual "Singing On The Mountain". July brings additional throngs of visitors to the Blue Ridge vacationlands for the Grandfather Mountain Highland Games and Gathering of the Scottish Clans. Two famous summer events in Asheville are the Craftsman's Fair of the Southern Highlands in July, and the Mountain Dance and Folk Festival in August. August features the Brevard Music Festival at Brevard Music Center in the Blue Ridge. The North Carolina Apple Festival at Hendersonville in early September hails the harvest season which culminates in the huge North Carolina State Fair at Raleigh in mid-October. Tobacco auctions can be visited in Eastern and Piedmont Carolina from late summer through autumn, and cigarette factories offer free guided tours year around at Winston-Salem, Durham, Greensboro, and Reidsville.
