

North Carolina Gives Cue To Educational Renaissance

"During Governor Terry Sanford's first two years in office public education and the public schools moved forward faster and further, percentage wise, than did the cause and the schools in any other American State."

This was a statement by Dr. W. Amos Abrams, editor and assistant executive secretary of NORTH CAROLINA EDUCATION, as he told faculty and students at Appalachian State Teachers College during convocation services that the educational renaissance now evident in the South—in the neighbor states—has taken its cue from North Carolina.

He said, "I confidently predict that historians will have this to say about the last two years of Governor Sanford's administration—that even as the public schools advanced during the first two years, so will higher education move forward in North Carolina between 1963 and 1965—as will higher education and state-supported colleges and universities in no other American State!"

"We stand today on the threshold of an era of progress, the like of which we have not known and that which we have known is indeed but a prologue to that which is yet to be."

Dr. Abrams declared that higher education has come into its own, and deservedly so, by action of the present Legislature. Some $82,000,000 a percentage increase of 38 per cent over last year's money, has been appropriated for higher education and this does not include some $48,000,000 for capital outlay funds.

"I am proud to be a Tar Heel whose legislative representatives will take a forward step toward keeping our children in school, black and white, rich and poor, that they may look back on their youth and declare that in North Carolina every child had his chance."

"I am proud of a state which will provide an educational opportunity beyond the high school through a system of computer-type comprehensive community college so that whereas one high school graduate continues his education today—two high school graduates will do so tomorrow. In my opinion, this is the most meaningful piece of education legislation enacted into law since that which provided a public high school for all the children of all the people," Dr. Abrams said.

Dr. Abrams, a former professor at Appalachian College, was introduced by Dr. D. J. Whitener, dean of the college. Dr. Whitener also introduced the summer sessions administration.

Dr. W. H. Plemmons, president of ASTC, gave a word of welcome to the student body, visiting professors and special guests.

MISS SUSAN LAWRENCE

MISS SHARON JOHNSON

State Winners At Fruitland

Miss Susan Lawrence, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jack Lawrence and Miss Sharon Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Johnson were declared State winners in the Junior Memory Work Tournament, held at Fruitland Baptist Camp June 17.

This tournament is sponsored by the Training Union Department of the Baptist State Convention and features memorization of Bible verses.

Both girls are members of Greenway Baptist Church and Mrs. C. O. Vance is their junior leader.

POSTMAN'S PAL

Fremont, Calif.—A dog can be a mailman's pal or enemy—depending whose side the dog is on.

Serving a postal route where he walks 17 miles, Ken Lincome has been attacked and bit by dogs six times and he thought that was enough.

Now he is protected by a big German shepherd dog that walks 17 miles by his side. The collies and beagles aren't so aggressive any more.

Homogenized milk was first sold successfully in 1919.

GEESSE AND FARMER

Blair, Okla.—Lawrence DeVick has found the answer to the farm labor shortage. He has 200 feathered hired hands.

DeVick bought the geese for $300. They roam his cotton fields and eat the grass and weeds but have no taste for cotton. They are held in bounds by an electric fence 8 inches off the ground.

They do the work of 9 full-time human farm hands, according to Mr. DeVick.

Paul & Ralph Say:

The small boy came into the house crying, "Mama," he said, "Jackie fell into the pond and—"

"Oh!" shrieked the mother, "is he all right?"

"No," sobbed the small boy, "we tried to give him artificial respiration, but he kept getting up and walking away."

"Values are up—Protect your property. Increase coverage where necessary."
