WASHINGTON COMMENT

Goldwater Said To Be Ahead In G.O.P. Race

Washington, D. C.—Senator Barry Goldwater is still ahead in the delegate race in the Republican Party, despite the rise in prominence in recent weeks of Governor George Romney of Michigan as a challenger.

Governor Nelson Rockefeller is now said to realize the seriousness of his disadvantage. Close friends say he is now in the race more to block Goldwater than anything else. Some of his former supporters are frankly doubtful if he could get the GOP nomination, and even more doubtful about his chance of beating President John Kennedy should he get it.

The Homney effort takes into consideration the certain opposition to Goldwater of many of the former top leaders of the party. And it is also true that former President Eisenhower would not list Goldwater at the top of a list of his choices for the nomination.

The question is rapidly shaping up as to how much former bigwigs in the party can affect the outcome of the 1964 GOP convention. It should be recalled in this connection that former President Harry Truman and a large number of top party leaders, including Adlai Stevenson, could do little to change the trend at the 1960 Democratic party convention.

Goldwater stalwarts say delegates alone will decide who the Republican nominee will be, and they feel certain Goldwater is far ahead in the delegate race. This is largely true, but it cannot be denied that the voice of someone like Eisenhower would not go unheeded.

Thus the key to the outcome of the coming San Francisco convention might be how effective former party giants are in blocking the Goldwater drive, whether they come out openly or not.
