Thrifty Tips for the Homemaker

"THINK twice before you throw anything away," is a wise war-time slogan for every homemaker.

Empty baking powder cans, for instance, enameled, make good looking cigarette boxes. Pound coffee cans, enameled and decorated with a stencil or transfer design, can be transformed into cookie jars suitable for gifts.

Olive-oil castile soap that the medical profession has long recommended for hair, skin and baby care is fast disappearing because of war conditions. Fortunately for family thrift budgets, a new white floating soap called Swan has been invented that is just as pure and mild as expensive castile and meets all of the doctors' specifications for a fine textured soap that is perfect for shampoos and infant baths too. And it's thrifty to use for washing dishes and silks besides.

And here's another war-time tip. You can prolong the life of the family's precious rubber boots if you stuff them with enough cardboard to keep them erect when not in use. The cardboard will encourage the circulation of air that's necessary to prevent cracking.

You can make tired looking cretonne curtains look practically like new if you wash them with Swan soap. This thrifty, fine-textured new soap suds twice as fast as old-style soaps and

"Enriched" Flour Costs Only 20c Extra In Year

It is possible to "buy health" for only 20 cents extra per year, says Miss Mary Thomas, Extension nutritionist of N. C. State College. That is the additional cost of enough "enriched" flour to feed a person for a year, she explained.

The word "enriched," as used on sacks of flour and on loaves of bread, is not a commercial advertising slogan, Miss Thomas explained. It is a term proposed by the Federal Drug and Food Administration to designate flour and bread to which have been restored, synthetically, the most needed nutrients of whole wheat. Enriched bread and flour is endorsed by the highest Government authorities.

It costs 5 cents, or less, per 34-pound sack to enrich flour, Miss Thomas explained, and only about 100 pounds of flour are needed annually to feed the average person.

"The enrichment feature of this National health program is unique in low cost per capital," the nutritionist declared. "While all the bread and flour in the country can be enriched for about 20 cents per person per year, an extra glass of milk a day will cost about $13, an extra egg or an orange $9 to $10, an extra quarter of a pound of fresh meat about $25."

Miss Thomas also emphasized the fact that "enriched" bread and flour is not medicine. "It is simply the restoration of certain vitamins and minerals which are removed from white flour and bread in the milling and baking processes. Enriched bread and flour look and taste just exactly like ordinary white flour and bread. But there is a big difference in the nutritive value of the products."
