Employers Of Eight Or More Included In 48-Hour Week

The 48-hour work week, which was established in the Elizabeth City Area on November 15, 1943, applies to all employers of 8 or more employees, according to an announcement made by P. B. Pollock, Area Director, War Manpower Commission. Therefore, employers in this category should be making their plans and arranging their schedules so that the 48-hour week can be adopted as quickly as possible.

There are certain exclusions under these regulations as follows:

1. Employers who regularly employ less than 8 workers.
2. Any establishment principally engaged in agriculture.
3. Employees of the State, County, or City Governments.
4. Youths under the age of 16 years.
5. Individuals who are not available for full-time work because of other employment, household responsibilities, or physical limitations.

The purposes of the 48-hour work week are to increase production, conserve manpower, and release workers for essential employment elsewhere. In view of this, it is the responsibility of all employers in this area to see that these purposes are fulfilled.

If employers fail to comply with the regulations, or file requests for exemption, steps will be taken at once to obtain compliance, according to Mr. Pollock.

Trial of civil cases began Tuesday morning, and on this docket were placed a number of cases of year's standing, which were ordered to be placed on the calendar by Judge Thompson on his last visit.

Eight of these cases were removed from the calendar by voluntary nonsuit, principally because one or more parties in the action have died. The non-suited cases were:

Arthur Chappell vs. G. A. Helms, concerning a restraining order on slot machines.

a suit concerning a debt. M. W. Jackson was awarded $1,650 personal damages and $330 for damages to his automobile as the result of a wreck in which he and Martin L. Perry were principals. Perry was also taxed with the cost of court.

In the case of J. C. Nixon vs. Murray Tynch over damages to an automobile, the defendant consented to a judgment to pay the plaintiff $100 and pay court costs.

The final case to be considered on Tuesday involved the New York Life Insurance Company vs. Mrs. J. R. Wheeler and the Bank of Edenton. The suit concerned the payment of a life insurance policy of the late J. R. Wheeler, which was held by the Bank of Edenton as collateral for a loan. The insurance company brought suit to determine if payment should be made to Mrs. Wheeler or the Bank of Edenton. The company placed $751.09 in the hands of the Clerk of Court to be paid as the court directs. A number of legal angles were argued Tuesday afternoon, the case going into Wednesday.
