Jobs For Many

With a constitution and by-laws adopted by the Chamber Commerce and Merchants Association and various committees assigned to specific duties, the organization is now ready to launch upon a new year. New blood has been injected into the organization, with Jesse Harrell at the helm and a number of new faces appearing on the board of directors, but these younger members feel the need of the stabilizing advice of those who have been associated with the Chamber of Commerce for many years.

President Harrell made a timely request at Monday night's meeting when at the outset he appealed for a frank discussion of Chamber of Commerce matters at the organization's meetings rather than expression of opinions and criticism in drug stores or on street corners. Mr. Harrell is entirely right, for in any organization problems should be settled by the group as a whole, and no member should be so small as to become angered if another member's views do not coincide with his. Possibly many matters pertaining to the Chamber of Commerce work will call for different views, so that when such occasions arise, members should feel free to express their views openly at the meetings in order for the organization to benefit by different viewpoints. Very little progress can be made if these opinions are aired on the street where no action can be taken and comparatively few have an opportunity to hear some particular slant which may be for the best interest of the organization of vice versa.

The Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association is ready to begin functioning, and to be the success it should be, will require a generous representation of Edenton and Chowan County's business and professional men, as well as others who have an interest in the progress and welfare of the county as a whole. President Harrell, the officers, directors and various committees will be obliged to make many personal sacrifices during the year for which there is no remuneration, save the satisfaction of realizing that they are making a contribution toward making Edenton and Chowan County a better place in which to live and enjoy life. This should be the desire of many people in the county, who should be equally as anxious to see Chowan prosper, so that they should be willing to join the organization and help in whatever way they can to bring success.

What helps the county as a whole helps the individual making up the county, so that the Chamber of Commerce should have the backing of many citizens, all working toward the one common goal—progress in Chowan County.

How Not To Get Tired

The following timely article was written by Charles Davis of Baso River, Cape Cod, Massachusetts:

"All of us who are physically active in work or play may get tired because of its continuance. The answer to how not to get physically tired, is to stop, if one can, the activity before we are tired.

"But there are many of us who do not get physically tired, because our work or play is not sufficiently strenuous or long to make us tired. We however often get tired mentally or spiritually. How can we prevent this?"

"The study of the Science of the Mind, as set forth through 'Individual Psychology', established by that greatest of all minds, Dr. Alfred Adler, of Vienna, shows that our emotions are self-created to speed us to a goal we have established in the belief that such emotion will help attain the goal we seek. Emotions do not just happen out of the air.

"Our emotions can be divided into two classes; those that disturb us, (a) and those that satisfy us (b).

"(a) Anger, sadness, disgust, fear, anxiety, ambition, envy, malice, jealousy, vanity, avarice, hate, worry, annoyance, sorrow, seclusiveness, faint-heartedness, pedantry, servility, moodiness, hard luck, boastfulness, all are disturbing emotions, and being based on unworthy, unselfish goals, cause one to get tired.

"(b) Cheerfulness, joy, laughter, smiling, sympathy, understanding, modesty, love, affection, being a fellow-man, being based on worthwhile, social goals, cannot cause one to get tired, for they are pleasing and peaceful.

"So if one can reduce the times and lengths of (a) to longer and longer intervals one need never be tired and one can have as many, as long and as often of (b) as one wants, as they cannot tire you.

"Adler has shown that we can all do what we want to if we will constantly train hard enough. In other words, we can eliminate (a) to such an extent as to never be tired. How?"

"1. We must understand the above. 2. We must be fully convinced of its truth, or we do not understand. 3. We must want to attain the goal set forth above, and, 4. We must train, train, train. This I have done for so many years that (a) is aroused in me so seldom and at such long intervals that I never get tired and when so aroused, knowing and understanding as I do, they can be checked and fully stopped almost at once, because knowing that they are aroused by an unworthy goal, I change the goal and in so changing, they immediately disappear.

"The above, being a great scientific truth can be used and accomplished by every one of us. Try it and see. The next time you have a disturbing emotion, stop and say to yourself, 'What is the goal I have established?' You will be surprised that the very question is likely to give the answer, enabling you to change the goal and get rid of the disturbing emotion, as I have been doing for a long time back, with the result that, never mind how many hours or how hard I work, I am never tired. You, every one of you can do the same if you, (a) understand; (b) are fully convinced; (c) want to, and (d) train."

HEARD & SEEN

By "BUFF"

As was predicted editorially last week, Chowan County's homecoming day for World War II veterans was a splendid success, and though simple, it again demonstrated what can be accomplished when there is a spirit of cooperation. The program went off without a hitch, so that West Byrum, general chairman, feels well repaid for the worry he experienced from the time he was appointed chairman until the whole affair was over. And here's another bouquet for the group of former Edenton Band members who gathered together and dusted off their instruments to play in the parade and at the dance when it was learned that the 50-piece Army band could not come as scheduled. There were not 50 pieces in the local band, but they played in such manner as to remind many of us of a few years ago when the Edenton Band was in its prime and took no back seat on any occasion. Former Director Charlie McCullers came over from Kinston to help out in the emergency, and his presence so inspired the other players that the music was in keeping with the remainder of a very delightful program. A large number of veterans marched in the parade, but it was very apparent that the marching was not as unpleasant as it was only a few short months ago for some of them. Anyway, the whole affair went off in fine style and was in keeping with the desire to show some appreciation for those who served in the armed forces. But is that to be all? Remember, a fund has been set up as a nucleus for a more permanent memorial in honor of Chowan's boys and girls who were in the armed forces during the great war.

Returning home Sunday afternoon from another trip to Pennsylvania, I've about decided to run for Congress in the next election. The only platform I'd have would be a uniform location for traffic lights. As it is now, some are in the middle of streets, some on the left hand side and others on the right hand side. It's a dickens of a job sometimes watching for a red light at the same time a fellow must be on his P's and Q's to keep from running into another car or have another guy run into him. All of which is my excuse for running through at least two red lights, and maybe more for all I know. At any rate, the cops must not have been on the job, for none of 'em chased me, nor did I get a ticket.

The trip to Pennsylvania was made in order to take my dad back home after spending a vacation in Edenton. His visit made him feel a lot younger, for quite a few folks wanted to know if he was not my brother instead of my daddy. At any rate, while here, he became an ardent baseball rooster for the Edenton Colonials, claiming that he brought luck, for every game he attended the Edenton team came out ahead. Gosh, it might be a good idea to bring him back in order to win enough games to get on the top rung of the league. But then while I was away, the Colonials went on a winning spree, so maybe the boys on the team are playing better ball. But just the same on Tuesday night when things looked mighty blue, I told Eddie Spires I was going to light up my old pipe to bring luck after puffing away on a cigar. And it did, for shortly afterward Joe Wheeler's long fly to left field hit a wire and glanced away from Fred Fearling, who was waiting for it. The score was tied later and finally the Colonials won out in the tenth inning. Methinks I'll always take the old pipe along hereafter.

Stopping off in Alexandria, I learned that Abe Martin had left the USO there, but could not find out where he went. It was about dinner time, so I tried to look up Vernon White, a former Edentonian who lives there, but forgetting to take his address with me, it didn't take long to learn that Alexandria is not like Edenton, where almost everyone knows everybody else and can tell a stranger just about where he lives.

I haven't had time to hang around the Police Station much lately, but have been noticing that Chief George Dail has not been in his usual jovial mood. The reason is that he had a death in the "family." Beans, his 11-year-old Boston bull dog, is dead and in his passing Chief Dail senses a loss almost as great as if a member of the family died. Beans was a constant companion of Chief Dail and was numbered among the most popular dogs in Edenton. His gruff barking was a familiar sound around the Police Station, but Beans was the sort of dog that minded his own business—a trait which plenty of human beings might well emulate. He was a regular customer of Jim Davenport's Friendly Market, for Chief Dail bought meat for him more regularly, no doubt, than he did for himself. For dessert, Beans journeyed down to Jordan Yates' service station, where he had a standing order for ice cream. Yes, Beans is dead, so that there is quite a difference around the Police Station and, I reckon, around the Dail home as well.

Wednesday being the day The Herald goes to press, I am kept pretty close and lose out on what is happening. However, I understand Al and Kitty Campen pulled off a "carnival" right back of The Herald office all day Wednesday, but being so busy, I could not attend nor did I hear any of the usual carnival noise. Maybe they didn't want too much publicity for fear Town Council would require payment of the carnival tax. These two youngsters also sold ice cold lemonade just around the corner the other day when it was hot as blazes. We boys in The Herald office were itching for a cold drink at a time the stores were "fresh out." I'm going to give the two gals a lesson on advertising.

Yep, times are gradually getting back to normal, for at the Red Men's meeting Monday night George T. White stood at the door and handed every member a cigar as he entered the hall. The reason: George several days ago became the daddy of a bouncing baby boy, who is named George T., Jr. Congratulations are, therefore, in order for two reasons, first for becoming the daddy of a boy and second for forking out cigars before a strong hint appeared in this column. Anyway, George says the newcomer can kick up a storm when he wants something to eat.

There is no rationing of bicycle licenses in Edenton, and Chief of Police George Dail says he has about 100 more at Police Headquarters. According to his figures, about 100 less licenses have been purchased than last year. These licenses were supposed to be bought and displayed on bicycles by July 1, so that those who have not complied with the law had better buy the license rather than have to explain why it has not been bought and displayed.

Northern Stars Of Albemarle League Again Trim South

Large Number of Fans Witness Game Thursday Night

In an exhibition all-star game played on Hicks Field Thursday night, players from the three teams representing the northern half of the Albemarle League for the second time easily defeated the southern half of the league 14-6. Players from Elizabeth City, Hertford and Camden played on the northern team, while Edenton, Colerain and Windsor players composed the southern outfit.

The northerners scored three runs in each of the first and sixth innings and in the seventh they went on a rampage to score six runs. Two more runs were added in the eighth. The southerners tied the score 3-3 in their half of the first and took the lead 4-3 by scoring a run in the second, which was held until the sixth inning. Two more runs were added in the seventh.

John Copley worked on the mound for the victors all of the game, while the losing team used Castellor, E. White, Chitty, Miller and Hollowell. L. Seymour caught for the northern half, while Edwards and Hoggard were behind the plate for the southerners.

Hits during the game were plentiful, with the winners being credited with 14 and the losers 11.

Many fans were on hand to witness the game, which was rather listless and lacked the interest of the regular league games.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ARE TAXES TOO HIGH?

What is all of this I hear? "Taxes too high" for 1946-1947. A copy of the City Council's actions is in the Town Clerk's office for inspection by all interested citizens who may be dissatisfied.

I wonder is this dissatisfaction coming from dwellers on the dirt streets or the happy residents in the clean part of the City.

Inspecting the record is not the way to reduce the proposed scale. Call for a city-wide vote, and put persons over it who are in favor of the increase.

Chamber Of Commerce Adopts New By-Laws

committee was negotiating with C. L. McCullers, former part time secretary and band director, now Chamber of Commerce secretary at Kinston, but that Mr. McCullers had not given a reply. Mr. Harrell also had a telegram in the form of an application for the secretaryship. He did not divulge the name of the party but said he would turn the application over to the committee.

Ralph Parrish, on behalf of the Finance Committee, asked for ideas relative to the policy of securing members and raising funds. This, too, resulted in quite a lengthy discussion, but no definite plan was arrived at, so that the method to be adopted will be in the hands of the committee and board of directors. Some members expressed the belief that each business should be assessed the same amount, while others advanced the opinion that dues should depend upon the amount of business done by the various concerns, with a flat-fee for non-merchants who desire to join the organization. Still another idea advanced would charge a certain amount per membership, with various concerns expected to take membership in proportion to the amount of business done.

During the meeting President Harrell asked Ralph Parrish to read the minutes of two directors' meetings which were held since the last general meeting.

Bicycle Owners Lag In Buying Licenses

Chief of Police George I. Dail reports quite a bit of lagging in purchasing bicycle licenses in Edenton this year. Early this week Chief Dail said the Police Department had sold 100 less licenses than were sold last year.

The new licenses were supposed to be purchased and displayed on bicycles by July 1, the beginning of the Town's fiscal year, so that owners are urged to buy their license at once. The price is only 25 cents, which is too small to be taking chances on being picked up by police.
