

Madge Copeland Winner in County Speaking Contest

Represents Chowan In District Elimination Round

The Chowan County elimination contest in the State-wide Soil Conservation Public Speaking Contest was held at Chowan High School last Friday afternoon. This contest constituted the second round of elimination contests, the school contests having been held one week earlier. There were six contestants—three from the Edenton High School and three from Chowan High School—participating in the Chowan contest. They were Charles Overman, John Ward and Edra Williams from the Edenton school and Herbert Ray Lane, Malcolm Copeland and Madge Copeland from Chowan High School. The topic used by the speakers was "Soil Conservation and Its Relation to the Economy of North Carolina." John Ward confined his speech, however, to the topic of crop rotations and Herbert Ray Lane emphasized the wild-life conservation phase of the topic. All six contestants had well-prepared speeches and presented them in a very creditable manner. All speakers had the undivided attention of their audience.

Judges for the occasion were the Rev. R. N. Carroll of Edenton, the Rev. W. C. Francis of Tyrner and I. C. Yagel, county agent of Perquimans County. According to the judges' decision, Madge Copeland was the winning speaker, with John Ward scoring second place and Charles Overman scoring third place.

The Edenton-Chowan Chamber of Commerce sponsored the Chowan County contest and awarded prizes of a $25 War Savings Bond, $10 in cash and $5 in cash to the first, second and third highest scoring contestants respectively. The prizes were presented to the winners by Peter Carlton, manager of the Edenton-Chowan Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association. In addition to winning the first prize, Madge Copeland wins the privilege of representing Chowan County in the district elimination contest, held in the Edenton High School auditorium Wednesday of this week. Other counties eligible and having contestants in the district contest were Bertie, Hertford, Northampton, Gates, Currituck, Camden, Pasquotank and Perquimans. The judges for the district contest were Paul Edmonds of Gatesville, Ernest Tyler of Roxobel and the Rev. Harold Gilmer of Edenton. Prizes were awarded by the banks of the counties mentioned above.

The Chowan County contest was conducted by C. W. Overman, county agent of Chowan County. Mr. Overman congratulated the speakers very highly and likewise commended the coaches, including Miss Louise Wilson, Mrs. Phoebe Owens, E. S. White, teacher of vocational agriculture, Miss Paulina Hassell and Mrs. Mary Browning, for their efforts in making the contest so successful. R. C. Jordan, soil conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service was also recognized and given a hand for his work in making arrangements for the soil conservation contests. Time keepers for the contest were Robert S. Marsh, assistant county agent, and Lloyd Bunch, chairman of the Albemarle Board of Soil Conservation District Supervisors.
