Vegetable Contest Open To Farm Youth

North Carolina farm youth are eligible to enter the 12th annual $6,000 scholarship competition of the Nation-al Junior Vegetable Growers Association, according to H .M. Covington, horticultural specialist for State College Extension Service and State adult leader of NJVGA.

Covington said boys and girls age 12 through 21, with at least one year of garden project work are eligible to compete in this vegetable production and marketing contest.

Last year, he said, boys and girls in 44 states competed for the scholarships, donated by A & P Food Stores. Tar Heel youth who shared in the awards were Jenean James Madre, Elizabeth City, and Clarence C. Chappell, Jr., Belvidere, both State award winners. Also, Temple Griffin and Fay Batts, both of Nash County, won fifth place nationally in the demonstration contest.

Covington explained that the scholarship awards are based on a report of the entrant's garden project, his score in a short home study course, and a rating of his school and community activities. Full credit is given to projects entered in 4-H and FFA work. Other NJVGA competitions open to boys and girls interested in vegetables are the demonstration contest
