

Queen Elizabeth Will Be Honored By Lost Colony This Season

Dick Jordan Looks For Most Successful Production

Because The Lost Colony tells a poignant story which happened during the reign of her illustrious namesake, Paul Green's symphonic drama during its 13th season opening at Manteo on Saturday, June 27, will this year honor England's beloved Queen Elizabeth II, whose coronation on June 2 was top news throughout the world. The Lost Colony story in pantomime, song and dance and spoken words tells of Sir Walter Raleigh's 16th century attempts to plant a permanent settlement at Roanoke Island in the New World that was to become America, in 1584-87 during the reign of Queen Elizabeth of that English period.

During the past 12 seasons more than 600,000 persons have seen The Lost Colony, now America's longest-lived outdoor production. Each year there have been minor changes and for the 13th season which honors England's lovable Queen Elizabeth, the great historical epic with deletion of some lines and the addition of others by Author Paul Green the show is definitely slated to reach a zenith in show producing perfection under the direction of Directors Samuel Selden and Clifton Britton.

Last year a completely new scene depicting an Indian attack on the colonists' fort was added to the show to meet with favorable approval from audiences and to meet the acclaim of critics to write stories about the drama. This year in Act I, the colorful Queen's Garden scene will become more colorful and more exciting with the addition of fireworks, especially during the Queen's Garden scene. Through modern electronics, a more dramatic finale is being worked out for the play.

General Manager Dick Jordan stated this week that from all indications observed during current rehearsals now in full sway both day and night, The Lost Colony season which honors Queen Elizabeth II on its advertising brochures and the new souvenir program, will top all previous productions. "That is why The Lost Colony this year has given thousands of free passes to students of history, in order that they may see and hear the story of English-speaking America's as this drama portrays it," he said.

Corn Root Worm Pest Of Peanuts

Demonstration on Control on Rodney Harrell's Farm

"The Southern corn root worm has been a serious insect pest of peanuts for many years," says Assistant County Agent Robert S. Marsh. "Several chemicals have shown very promising results in controlling this insect."

On Thursday of last week J. P. Woodard, Extension peanut specialist, Dr. H. Eldon Scott, Extension entomologist, and Dr. J. R. Doggett, USDA entomologist, visited Rodney T. Harrell and started a result demonstration on controlling the corn root worm. They used a pound and one-half of actual heptachlor. This material, along with aldrin and dieldrin, have shown great promise in controlling this insect, and the results of this demonstration will be interesting to all Chowan peanut farmers who are bothered by this pest.

Gatesville Boy Makes Good Start In Bid For Big League Success

Local baseball fans will be interested to know that Bobby Harrell, former star pitcher for Gatesville High School, who was signed up by the Philadelphia team in the National League, got his first opportunity to pitch a big league game Monday of this week.

Harrell is in training with a Philadelphia farm team in Bradford, Pa., and pitched against the Hamilton, Canada, team, winning the game by a score of 7 to 4.

He was nervous to begin with, and walked two men, then settled down and struck out the next four to face him. In the hitting department he hit a three-bagger the first time up which lacked only about two feet of clearing the wall. The hit drove in a run and Harrell also scored later. He also made another hit which drove in a run.
