

Bureau Opposed To Importation Of Va. Type Peanuts

Supplies Adequate For Present Needs of Industry

The North Carolina Farm Bureau has protested a recommendation by the U. S. Tariff Commission for increases in imports of large-size Virginia Type peanuts.

The Farm Bureau, having already told a Tariff Commission hearing that no increases were necessary, urged President Eisenhower to turn down the Commission's recommendation.

In a wire to the President the Farm Bureau said supplies of Virginia type nuts were "adequate for present needs of the industry."

R. Flake Shaw, Farm Bureau executive vice-president, said that such increases would "have the effect of depressing prices after the present crop begins to move into trade channels."

A hearing to determine the necessity for increasing peanut imports was held last month in Washington. The hearing was instituted by the Peanut and Nut Salters Association.

At that time Will H. Rogers, director of organization for the Farm Bureau, urged the Commission to turn down the request for increases, since "the present crop begins moving into market by November 1, and imports would add excessively to stocks on hand, making a total surplus of about 30 million tons."

The Commission's ruling, made public recently, indicated peanut users would be permitted to move unlimited quantities of peanuts before September 26. The fact that a deadline was set, though, represented a partial victory for the Farm Bureau.

NO COMMENT

By JAMES W. DOUTMAN

Washington—By use of the veto and admonitions, President Eisenhower has taken a fresh stand against the recent Congressional tendency to concentrate more power in a vast, centralized government. He has issued a call, instead, for a shift in responsibility to local governments or private sources—and in many cases a sharing of both cost and responsibility.

The effect of the President's stand, also, is to oppose "give-aways" by Congress in which it has voted to use its power of the purse to take money from one group of citizens and give it to another.

The stern tone of Mr. Eisenhower's admonitions points the way to a revival of the campaign to "bring government back home," which was a basic objective of his Administration when it entered office. Further, the White House attitude indicates that new life may be injected into the campaign for improvement of the proposals of the Hoover and Kestnbaum Commission to cut down swollen bureaucracy, and to restore power to the states.

Rivers and Harbors Veto—Mr. Eisenhower—risking political reprisals—vetoed a $1.6 billion rivers and harbors authorization bill in which Congress both flouted the law and succumbed to "pork barrel" entreaties.

He found that the measure contained 32 projects, for which $530 million was authorized, on which the Army Engineers had not reported, as required by law. These are so-called "pork-barrel" projects put into the bill by eager members of Congress.

A special defect, the President found, was the action of Congress in cutting down the amount of local participation in rivers and harbors and flood control projects required—even below the amount agreed to by local interests.

The President reiterated his demand that on many projects there be both aid and local responsibility—those in contrast to complete rule by federal bureaucracy.

Flood Insurance Costs—Again, in the new flood damage insurance venture—a $7 billion federal project—the President found a tendency to load all costs and responsibility on the federal government—and he protested while signing the bill.

One proposal of the Administration was that the federal government and the states share a 40 per cent subsidy on the premiums paid by individuals and firms taking out flood insurance.

But Congress—moved by a "give-away" spirit—would not agree. It loaded the entire subsidy on the federal government—thus reducing local influence against waste and mismanagement of the venture.

Watershed Protection Act—The President approved a new watershed protection act.

Farmers Advised To Use Caution In Marketing Corn

No Farmer Required To Lose Money on His Corn Crop

Don't rush too much corn to market at harvest time if you want your crop to pay for itself farmers were cautioned this week.

According to H. D. Godfrey, Administrative Officer for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State Committee, farmers can do a lot to protect the market for their crop by spreading out their sales throughout the marketing year. "No farmer has to lose money on his corn," Godfrey said. "He can get ready cash through his local ASC office under the Corn Loan Program, and thus carry his crop over the usual low price period at harvest time instead of dumping it on the market. Or if he doesn't want to store his corn under loan, he can still have price protection by covering his crop with a purchase agreement."

"In either case, a producer may sell his corn any time he wishes. "There's a definite connection between heavy marketings and low prices during and immediately after harvest and the purpose of ASC's Price Support Program is to help farmers stabilize prices by marketing their crops in an orderly manner. This orderly marketing helps consumers too by preventing short supplies and high prices later in the year."

The corn loan rate for the 1956 crop has been set at $1.65 and $1.40 in commercial corn counties with the support rate in non-commercial corn counties set at $1.36 a bushel. Producers in North Carolina's 27 commercial corn counties who plant within their acreage allotment on their soil bank corn base are eligible for support at the rate of $1.65 a bushel. Producers in these counties who overplant their allotment will have their corn supported at $1.40 a bushel. The $1.36 rate, according to Godfrey, applies to all producers in non-commercial corn counties. Further information on the corn price support program may be obtained from the local ASC office.
