

What's In Store?

By JOON AYNES

The new store fronts on Mitchener's Pharmacy and Ralph Parrish's store are a credit to the community.

Every improvement to any store in town benefits all. The new Edenton Furniture Company building and the new Sears Roebuck Catalog Sales Office have improved the looks of the business section of Broad Street, too, and make it a more desirable place to shop.

First impressions do count. And with the added attractiveness of these stores, the town looks like it's up and coming and ready for business.

The windows of a shop are supposed to entice people into the store to look at the merchandise within. A personal impression, when I first arrived in town, was that there was but one nice shop, The Betty Shoppe, because it was the only store that displayed its merchandise in an attractive way. To see old faded posters, dead flies, dust so thick you could write in it, clothes thrown on hangers with the belts hanging below the belt line, colors that clash keep people away in droves instead of luring them into the shops. Also, I've wondered why some of the stores feel it is necessary to put everything they have in the window. Attractive displays of a few items, changed frequently, would bring in more people than the confusing displays of everything in the store for sale. With everything looking better all the time, it might be worth taking a critical look at the windows to see what could be done to make them look better, too.

Two more items for the "Shop In Edenton" campaign: Seeing an ad in a Norfolk paper, I sent for a small metal table. The price was quite good. Only trouble, when it arrived, the delivery charges ran it up to more than I would have paid for the same thing if I had ordered it from the local Sears store. Live and learn. It's something to consider, though . . . the shipping charges on an item and if you would do just as well or better to buy in town.

Then a friend went to Norfolk to buy her little girl a coat. Between Norfolk and Edenton the coat was lost, so she had to get another coat for her little girl. The second time she shopped at the Jill Shoppe and bought one of the car coats with detachable hoods for less than she had paid for the coat in Norfolk . . . and likes it better and thinks it is better made and better quality than the one that was lost. Of course, it makes it a rather expensive little girl's coat if you count the price of the coat that was lost, too, but the car coats are cute and attractively priced, if you should be in the market for a young lady's coat.

Not too many items mentioned being wanted this week:

1. Crochet hooks and embroidery threads.
2. Paper guest towels. (Reminds me I saw some unusual Christmas paper napkins in Bell's Gift Shop).
3. Where does one find the quart sized GLASS measuring pitchers? With possible entertaining ahead, did you know that you can rent punch bowls, cups and saucers, etc., from Malone's 5 and 10?
