

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Washington—The extent to which the underworld has been able to corrupt officials and organizations is currently being demonstrated by the hearings conducted before the Senate Racketeering Committee.

Threat Of Vice
Our committee has been continuing its investigation of this sordid activity. I am certain that you have been following the hearings; I will not outline here the evidence we have heard. There is one thing that all good citizens should learn with renewed emphasis. It is that the tentacles of crime and the underworld can corrupt in high and low places and that the battle against vice and corruption is a threat to legitimate organizations.

In this particular phase of our investigation, we have been inquiring into the activities of some of the leaders of the Teamsters Union and their tie-in with the underworld. It must be shocking for the law-abiding members of this union to learn of the apparent deep penetration of the underworld into their union in the Pacific Northwest. It must also be shocking to the good people of Portland.

Repeated
It can be said that the story will undoubtedly be repeated in other places as our inquiry unfolds. I hope that we can be instrumental in helping to destroy this cancer that is seriously threatening the very vitals of so many of our cities. I refer to the infiltration of the underworld into high places of influence and control.

To Raleigh
My plans are to attend the Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner in Raleigh on March 16. The speaker is Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas, the Majority Leader of the Senate. He is a vigorous individual, a natural-born leader of men, and I am glad that he is to be the speaker for this meeting.

The young man approached his prospective father-in-law. "Mr. Smith," he said, "your daughter has promised to be my wife."

"Well," growled the girl's father, "it was your own fault. What did you expect if you kept hanging around here every night?" "He asked for it!" is a common expression and a true one. Time and again we groan over the fate which has "befallen" us. Things do not happen with responsibility.

New Laws?
The work of the investigation is for the purpose of determining to what extent present laws need remodeling and what, if any, new legislation is needed to curb the infiltration of the underworld into legitimate labor and management activity. If it has the side value of calling attention to our country the necessity for constant vigilance to prevent the spread of this plague, the hearing will have been very worthwhile.

Power Of Syndicates
I am reminded that so much of our attention has been devoted to other pursuits by the demands of the day that the country has been lulled into a passive mood toward the dangers of crime and the crime syndicates. They are real; they do exist; their toll of life and character is astounding. Moreover, they have great power.

not "befall" us without good reason. Every effect has its cause. The young lady we know, who suffers from constant heartbreak, "goes overboard" for a most reliable type of man. An emotional blur blinds her. If she would choose her heart interest more carefully, she would avoid heartbreak.

When we violate good taste, the effect is censure. When we over-indulge ourselves, the effect is harmful. Yet we moan that our luck has been bad; that fate has treated us unkindly.

Happiness and unhappiness are our own creations. They are not visited upon us from outside sources. They are the effects of our actions and attitudes. We only need to be careful of our causes. The effects will take care of themselves.
