

Warning Given To Be Careful Over Holidays

If you are a man between 25 and 44 years old, and you drive a car, be extra careful in traffic over the Fourth of July week-end.

The National Safety Council, which is conducting a nationwide campaign to hold Fourth of July accidents to a minimum, says the typical holiday traffic victim is a male driver between 25 and 44 years old. He usually is the only one killed in the crash in which he is involved, either because he is alone or because the others were lucky enough to escape death.

The accident in which the typical holiday victim dies occurs between 6 P. M. and midnight—with the odds on 6 to 9 P. M.—on the night of the first full day of the holiday period.

The accident is most likely to occur on a rural highway or in an unincorporated area, and the chances are good that the victim has been drinking.

The typical victim is speeding when the accident occurs. It is caused by an out-of-control plunge off the road or a rending crash with another car.

A recent study by the Council of holiday traffic accidents shows that the most dangerous period for the holiday traveler is while en route to his holiday destination, rather than the trip home.

Motor vehicle accidents lead the list of Fourth of July hazards, the Council says. Drowning from swimming and fishing accidents is the second highest risk. Other causes of death are fireworks and firearms, sunstroke and heat exhaustion, food poisoning and falls.

One hundred and fifty-eight national organizations have joined with the Council in a unified effort to curb these accidents. The Fourth of July safety campaign is designed to increase public awareness of the extra holiday hazards and the extra caution needed to overcome them. It also seeks to help officials, traffic officers and safety leaders in their efforts to hold down the death toll.

The Food Picture For Future Months

If you look ahead to the last half of 1957, says George Abshier, Agricultural Extension Service consumer marketing specialist, you'll see that most food supplies are near last year's high level.

The food picture shows that there will be slightly less meat, but plenty to meet the demand, and there will be a few less eggs this year than last.

There will be more broilers and turkeys, more milk, and more peaches, but less citrus fruits and apples. More potatoes and canned and frozen vegetables are prospects for the future, but fewer fresh vegetables and sweet potatoes.

According to Abshier, prices are slightly higher than last year, but there's still plenty of food to meet strong demands.

Abshier's report shows that consumption of meat in 1957 will be about eight pounds below the record 167 pounds per capita in 1956. Beef consumption will be about four pounds less than last year, with the last half of the year's supplies under that of 1956. This results in prices slightly above those last year.

Milk production is running at a record high level, indicating a new record high production. "This doesn't affect prices much," says Abshier, "but it indicates a welcome plentiful supply." The peach crop is considerably larger this year than in 1956 in the southern region, Abshier continues. He states that the quality will be good and prices attractive to shoppers. He adds that there will be considerably fewer cantaloupes this year, but more watermelons.
