

WITH THE FARM WOMEN

By VIRGINIA M. NANCE, Extension Home Economics Editor

Realizing Her Dream
 Agnes Matthis, senior 4-H Club member of the Spring Creek High School in Madison County, is at last going to realize a dream—a college education. And what has made it possible for this to come true?

Home Demonstration Agent Jamie M. Ramsey says that Agnes has been planning for a college education all through high school. She was the leading member of the 4-H poultry chain four years ago when she first carried this project. Each year she has made progress by adding 100 chicks to it—at the present time she has over 400 laying pullets.

With the encouragement of her parents Agnes has been able to save enough money to enable her to enter college this fall—and she says she owes it all to her 4-H Club work and the assistance from 4-H leaders.

4-H Newsletter
 Four-H Club members in Durham County are beginning a new project according to reports from Mrs. Carolyn Schultz, assistant home agent. They're publishing a monthly newsletter for all club members—and they're calling it the "Lucky Leaves."

Durham County, since consolidation, has only two high schools; consequently, they are large and have many activities. Because of this club members requested the newsletter to inform them of 4-H activities.

Mrs. Shultz says that the project has been turned over completely to the 4-H'ers, with the assistant farm and home agents acting as advisors. It is hoped that the newsletter will make 4-H Club work more a part of the school activities and provide experience for many club members who will be given an opportunity to work on the paper. The editors say, "The more 4-H'ers we can use the better our paper will be."

Always Something To Learn
 "Freeze for Goodness Sake" was the subject of study for Stokes County home demonstration club members recently. Mrs. Tom Preston, Pine Hall, said after the demonstration, "That was the most helpful demonstration we've had."

Mrs. G. D. Watkins, Lawsonville club, remarked, "I started to miss the club meeting because I was so tired, had a lot of work to do, and the weather was bad. But I got out my yearbook and looked to see what demonstration the agent would give, and when I saw it was on freezing, I knew I had to go. I like to freeze, and I always feel that there's something I can learn."

Home Agent Mrs. Betty D. Friddle indicated that the overall response and comments from club women was a good indication that they learned a great deal about freezing.

Room Improvement
 There has certainly been at least one busy 4-H Club girl in Pender County, according to Frances H. Bostic, assistant home demonstration agent. And she is Jacqueline Gurganious, 4-H member from Penderlea School.

Jacqueline has been working on her room improvement project, and with the help of her father she has already lowered the ceiling in her room. Mrs. Bostic has helped with the color schemes and other plans, while Jacqueline is beginning work on plans for repainting the room. Then she hopes to make curtains and bedspread to match.

Commissioners' Dinner
 National Home Demonstration Club Week was observed in a big way in Pasquotank County last week, as well as in all other counties in the state.

Miss Edna Bishop, home demonstration agent, reports that one of the main events of the week was a dinner given honoring the County Commissioners. Mrs. A. B. Etheridge and Mrs. S. L. Lowery served as co-chairmen for the event, with the foods and nutrition project leaders as their assistants. No doubt they were a well-fed group.

Serving on the program committee were Mrs. Reid Overman, Mrs. Andrew Wilson, Mrs. Raymond Newbern and Mrs. Cecil Perry. Mrs. W. E. Lewis and Mrs. Nick Poulos were in charge of decorations.

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Washington — One of the most impressive manifestations of the loyalty of North Carolinians to their friends is the way they come to Washington to see a new Senator take his oath of office.

Loyalty
 The demonstration of this loyalty was again obvious in connection with Senator B. Everett Jordan's "swearing in" here in the Senate. North Carolinians took virtually all of the gallery space. The reception overflowed the committee room. Impressed by this nature of occasions of this nature, the Secretary of the Senate said to me that he had observed that more North Carolina people attend the oath-taking than is true of any other States. As a consequence of this display of loyalty on the part of friends and neighbors, Tarheels have a monopoly on the Capitol for a day.

My feeling is that the actual oath-taking ceremony should be more formal and that all Senators should take time to attend a ceremony of this type. Actually, the affair is over so quickly that spectators in the gallery are little more than seated before the oath is given and the name signed into the Senate book.

Three Senators
 June 11, 1958, will end the fourth year that I have had the honor of sitting in the Senate from North Carolina. During that time I have had the pleasure of working closely with three Senators, Alton A. Lennon, W. Kerr Scott and now B. Everett Jordan. A characteristic of North Carolina Senators is that they work together as a team, and it is most unusual when legislative disagreement of any consequence develops. This is not true of many States.

Labor Union Reform
 The Senate Labor Subcommittee, under the Chairmanship of Senator Kennedy, has been holding daily sessions to prepare a labor-management reform bill. There is a strong insistence in the Senate for action this session on some legislation to correct abuses as discovered by the McClellan Committee. A bill has been promised by the Committee for debate and action before adjournment.

I opposed the earlier attempts to write a labor bill on the Senate Floor. This was not due to the merits of the amendment; but to my conviction that the Senate should not bypass committee procedures.

Orderly Manner
 The orderly procedure now being followed is the only satisfactory way to attain a constructive bill. All sides of the issue have been given an opportunity to be heard and to present their points of view. The hearings serve to produce a much needed record for study by the Congress and public. Labor-management relations is a very complex field in which to legislate. No wise bill can come except by careful analysis.

The McClellan Committee, the so-called Senate Rackets Committee, has uncovered shocking evidence of corruption among some union leaders and some management. Service on this Committee has required an enormous amount of time, but the work has been of great significance. The Committee's findings will aid in constructive legislation to prevent these abuses in the future.

SUNLAY SCHOOL LESSON

 barren." (James 2:20). Faith in God engenders courage; courage, in turn, calls for action; therefore there can be no true faith without action. If we honestly believe that God desires us to take certain course, then we should take that course without hesitation. It is this active brand of faith that is really important in the eyes of God. Caleb was permitted to see the Promised Land "because he has a different spirit" (Numbers 14:24). All the other Israelites literally died in their tracks; they were afraid and confused; they didn't want to go forward, and they couldn't go back. They stagnated.

The test of God's people is whether they go forward. The test is not "Do they believe in God?" — but "Do they do the will of God?" These days in which we live now are trying times. Our civilization stands on the threshold of a great new era. Scientific discoveries and technological developments during the past few years have given us the promise of a new and glorious day for all mankind, but at the same time this same civilization of ours groans and falters under the impact of tensions and frustrations, fears and anxieties. We are staggering under a fearsome load — international, economic unrest, cold wars and feverish arms and munitions races; juvenile delinquency and family instability, and many more. It is a known fact that the more advanced a civilization becomes, the more necessary it becomes to have a strong, positive faith, a loyalty to One who is sufficient to meet our needs. We are being tested today, just as the Israelites were tested in their day. Let us not be like them. Let us be like Caleb and Joshua . . . with confidence and faith in God and his goodness, his power; let us prove a practical faith in Him, and charge ourselves to do his bidding, as we see it, unflinchingly.

In character, in manner, in style, in all things, the supreme excellence is simplicity.

Edenton Man Wins Good Conduct Medal

Army Sergeant First Class Dave L. Barnes, 29, son of David C. Barnes, Route 1, Edenton, recently received his second award of the Good Conduct Medal while serving with the 68th Armor in Baumholder, Germany.

Sergeant Barnes, a tank commander in the armor's Company B, received the decoration for his exemplary behavior, fidelity and performance of duties.

The sergeant entered the Army in January, 1952, and arrived in Europe in September, 1956. His wife, Rebecca, is with him in Germany.

PROMOTED TO CORPORAL

Corporal Gerald R. Lambert of Marine Attack Squadron 211 last week received his warrant promoting him to his present rank from his commanding officer, Lieutenant Colonel H. A. Eisele in the commanding officer's office.

Lambert, from Biddeford, Maine, entered the Marine Corps in January, 1956, and is presently fulfilling the duties of a Jet Mechanic in VMA-211.

WHICH WASH-n-WEAR Will Turn Color

Select Wash-n-Wear blouses carefully if you choose to buy them. One brand may launder satisfactorily. Another may turn dirty yellow or fall apart. This may happen to dress or sport shirts, blouses, work or play clothes, or other wash-n-wear fabrics and garments, white or colored, normally bleached for stain removal and retention of original whiteness.

According to AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF LAUNDERING, inferior wash-n-wear garments may be made with certain resin finishes that absorb chlorine from hypochlorite bleach, commonly used. This can't rinse out and heat from ironing creates an acid which yellows or destroys the fabric.

If you buy wash-n-wear or other washables, be sure they carry the CERTIFIED WASHABLE SEAL of American Institute of Laundering. It certifies we can launder them to perfection.
