PERSONAL AND PRIVATE PROBLEMS

This column will attempt to answer personal and private problems of individuals who submit their questions to this column. These inquiries to include family and social problems and will cover questions that come up in adjusting oneself to society; economic questions to include adjustment to business life and careers. All inquiries correspondence and names will be held in the strictest confidence. All inquiries and questions should be addressed to "Three P's", care of The Chowan Herald, Edenton, N. C.

Dear Three P's:
I am in my middle twenties, a high school graduate. My job is one of routine and detail and very boring. Is there anything you might suggest that I might do that would be more interesting? My pay is satisfactory.

John M. D.

Dear John:
You must realize that all of life is made up of detail and routine, which is essential to the end product. Do not think in terms of the girl saying about the cow who thought the grass was greener and sweeter in the next field and became dissatisfied and starved to death as it could not jump the fence. To make your work more interesting study the part that you do in relation to the whole and you will realize that it has its important place. In this way you will understand the problems of the business in which you are engaged and fit you for greater things and more responsibility, and what is more important give you a happier outlook.

The Three P's:
I have been happily married for twelve years, have five children and live in the country. Lately my husband has become interested in a stenographer who works in town. I am much distressed and inclined to tell him to move out, but there is the problem of the children.

What should I do?
RUTH.
Dear Ruth:
You have answered part of your problem yourself when you mention the children. Do not do anything under emotional distress. Look at the problem calmly. Most men have an inclination to stray once in a while. Do not nag him, nor berate him, but in your attitude make him feel ashamed of himself. Then have a calm talk with him, pointing out what would happen if he persisted in his amour. Do everything you can to hold the family together for in a divided family everyone is unhappy and, of course, the effect is worse on the children. I am sure that your husband will see the folly of his ways and give up his so-called attachment to the other woman.

Three P's:
I am a farmer in my early thirties and fairly successful. I have been married for six years and have a son and daughter. My wife was brought up in town and has a yen for city life. Over two years ago my wife left me and went to the city, where she has an office job. She has my daughter and I have my son. My wife comes back every now and then but does not stay as she appears not to like country life. Can you help me?

Dear Jack:
You have a difficult problem to face. As you know, when two people are married they take each other for better or for worse. However, if your wife persists in her desire for city life, it is better to face reality rather than torture yourself and live in a state of emotional distress; further, beside thinking of your own distress you must think in terms of the effect upon the children in living in adverse, unhappy environment. I would have a calm and serious talk with your wife on her next visit and, if she persists in her liking for the city, then I would
