

KNOW YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

F. E. Bettendorf, representative of the Social Security Administration, is in Edenton every Thursday at the North Carolina Employment Security Commission in Citizens Bank Building.

Farmers know there is a time to plant, to cultivate, and a time to take in the crops. How many know there is a time to look at their social security protection? Finding out about social security too late could be worse than planting a crop too late.

Many farmers have not reported their farm earnings and it will soon be too late for many, especially in the older age group, to gain the social security credits that may mean the difference between protection and no benefits at all.

If a farm operator has net earnings of $400 or more in a year, he must report those earnings for social security. This will give him credits for the year. But even though he does not clear $400 in the year, he has an option to report from $400 to $1200 for that year depending on his gross farm income. This option is given only to farmers. But many farmers who had poor years have not taken advantage of the option and are losing credits for critical years.

It is still not too late for a farmer to correct his social security tax returns back to 1956. The farmer, like anyone else, needs a certain number of social security credits before benefits can be paid. Failure to file returns for a year such as 1956 could mean in many cases, a loss of protection or a substantial decrease in the benefit rate.

Tax returns can be amended back to 1956 if the corrected return is filed this year. It is now too late to file an amended return for the year 1955.

Farmers, especially in the low earnings group and those approaching retirement age, should look into their social security this year for their own protection and that of their families. If there is any question about how self-employment farm earnings should have been reported in the last three years, it is a good idea to see your social security representative with a copy of the tax returns for those three years. Or, if no returns were filed for a year, a record of the farm earnings should be brought along.

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Roberts

Hope our new fall schedule at WCDJ sounds good. Gives us an extra 15 minutes in the early part of the morning for "Reveille with Roberts". Even gives us a chance to come back, following the Chowan Hospital report, with more music on the pop side, plus news of some events in and around the area. Once again, we're busy broadcas- ting the football games and we've got Nick George turning in a fine play-by-play job. The broad- casts are heard every Saturday morning at 9:30. Coach Billings follows with his show, "Thought 'Al Capone' was the best pic- ture of its type since 'Dillinger'". Rod Steiger turned in an electrifying performance. Televi- sion version of Capone, paled by comparison. They don't send out New Year's greeting cards like they used to. I have a very handsome plate, says compli- ments of Mitchener's Pharmacy. All around it, a calendar. The year: 1909. The big North Carolina State Fair takes place from the 13th to the 17th of Octo- ber. Talk more about it in a later column. This was sent in by a woman (obviously): "Near- ly every town has its share of girls who are still single, because they couldn't stay awake while some fellow talked about him- self." Civic groups around the country cry for less sex and vio- lence in the movies. What hap- pens? Decent family pictures such as "Stars in My Crown", and "Shepherd of the Hills", starve at the box-office, while others flourish. Do those who campaign for decency on the sil- ver screen support the good family pictures? I wanted to write a poem about our recent visitors, but I can't think of a thing that rhymes with Khrush- chev, unless it's orange. I'll close without a poem. I'll close with best wishes for a happy week.

him so little and feel that he has treated God like a father. The awareness of God comes only when one gives God sacrifici- ally his best. Malachi's followers deemed God to have a local special in- terest in them—with the impli- cation that he cared for others much less, if at all. To this Malachi responds that the name of God is exalted not only in Israel but elsewhere throughout the world. This was the be- ginning of the belief in the uni- versality of God, carried further by Jesus who said, "I have other sheep not of this fold." There is no awareness abroad in his world for the man who delib- erately confines God to his own backyard. Wherever I fe- is greatly lived, men have the con- viction of God's concern for all people everywhere.

It is difficult to become re- sponsible for brothers whom we have never seen. Loyalty to a universal God caring for all hu- manity means in effect that we have a concern for not only our friends, but our enemies.

Throughout the history of Christianity there have been out- standing examples of loyalty to God—even at the expense of life itself. Wycliffe and Huss sacri- ficed their lives for their beliefs. These and others witnessed for the New Day, and died for their witness.

There is a higher form of re- ligious than that practiced for self-advancement. This is when one inwardly becomes aware of what the love of God is—what it means and does for him. A gratitude arises in his heart so great that he cannot refrain from being loyal to God, just for the joy of being loyal. It is selfless love expressed not to gain any reward, but for its own sake. The composer of fine and mov- ing music continues his work, knowing that he has little hope of payment or recognition. The surgeon who arises in the middle of the night to care for some drunk brought in from the gut- ter, battles to save that life with no idea of reward; the father and mother sitting up night af- ter night with the sick child who can never recover—these serve with no thought of reward.

So it is with loyal service to God. One seeks no reward. Loyalty is not given because we must give it, but because we may. The supreme expression of this sort of loyalty is revealed in Jesus. He never was coerced in- to doing anything. Malachi says that God keeps a book of remembrances. He does not forget those who have been loyal. This reveals one of the profound paradoxes of life. The man who serves God with no thought of reward in the end is rewarded by God.
