

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Washington — Legislative action slowed down to routine business during the traditional Lincoln Day recess. However, a routine day in the Senate saw seventeen bills and one resolution introduced, two judicial nominations confirmed, and a bill to abolish mandatory death sentences in certain cases in the District of Columbia debated. A number of important Congressional hearings are under way. The Senate Committee on Government Operations has been holding hearings on the proposal to create a Department of Urban Affairs and Housing. The Senate's Special Preparedness Subcommittee continues its hearings on military cold war education and censorship of military speeches. The Committee on Foreign Relations is holding hearings on S. 2768 which authorizes the United States to purchase United Nations bonds and the appropriation of funds therefor. The Senate Post Of-ice and Civil Service Committee has begun its hearings on postal rate increases. The Symington Special Subcommittee will soon be conducting hearings on stockpiling materials for national defense. Hearings are under way by the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee on the rights of military personnel.

Postal Revenue Bill — Postal rates on mail for many years have been subsidized by the taxpayers who have been paying for large postal deficits. The House has approved a bill which provides for increases in postal revenues to meet this annual deficit. I believe it is imperative for Congress to take action in this field at this session. I think that the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee will bring to the Senate a bill at this session which will attempt to equitably distribute necessary postal rate increases.

UN Bond Proposal — The task of making a decision as to whether or not I should vote for the proposal that the United States purchase United Nations bonds to the extent of $100 million has not been an easy one. When the proposal was first made, I was tempted to oppose it in order to express my disapproval of some of the actions of the United Nations. Since that time, however, I have given most serious consideration to the proposal and have reached the conclusion that responsible action on my part obliges me to vote for it. The United Nations is the only association of nations pledged to the task of preserving peace. We cannot afford to permit it to die for lack of financial sustenance. The President, who has access to sources of information far beyond those available to most of us, has expressed the opinion that there is a grave possibility that the United Nations will cease to exist if the United States does not purchase its bonds and thus encourage other nations to do likewise. Despite its imperfections, it is conceivable that the United Nations may eventually prove itself to be the road to a peaceful world. I am not willing to block a possible route to mankind's most cherished hope.
