MORE ABOUT TV—Much has been written of late of the present trend of TV's gravitation toward programs of violence in one form or another. Violence and conflict is the essence of good drama. Without conflict there is no plot, no suspense, the story falls apart. However, it does not have to take the form of physical violence, it can be a conflict of emotions or personalities. But it does seem that both forms of violence, which I call positive and negative, in some quarters are found to be objectionable. As I see it, dramatic situations that deal with tense emotions under conflict nothing. I still believe the producers should give us a balanced TV fare—a strong diet to those who like it, and a milder diet to those who don't. When programs are selective, as they are now, it's a simple matter to switch channels or turn your TV off altogether.

PHIL OSOPHER SAYS—Everybody is unhappy—because we are all seeking something we haven't found.

OVERHEARD—This fellow said, "First book I ever read that didn't have a dirty word in it." That statement is significant: either the fellow has been reading the wrong books, or too many bad books are published. And then again, it may be a matter of degree; this man's discriminatory powers may not be able to detect a GOOD word from a BAD one. And still again, he may have a distorted critical attitude that makes him unable to distinguish what words are permissible in literature and what are not. But yet from his statement, I gather this man must have read the book in its entirety, and he must have enjoyed it or I doubt he would have proceeded that far. And that, after all is said and done, is the ultimate criterion in judging books: the overall interest and literary value and not the seizing upon and taking out of context a few words or sentences that may in your opinion be in bad taste.

Future Of Fuel Oil Subject Of Speech At Rotary Meeting

"The completely oil powered home, including lighting and all other electric utilities in addition to heat is the goal of the petroleum industry," according to Don M. Ward, executive secretary of the North Carolina Oil Jobbers Association, speaking before the Edenton Rotary Club Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Ward related that the home oil generator is more imminent than most people realize, and its chief advantage will be economy since more than half the cost of electricity lies in the expense of transmitting it from power plant to the home, but of auxiliary importance is the fact of reducing danger of power failure during storms, etc.

Other industry developments which are causing oil dealers' pride to swell are: Water heaters that work up to 4 1/2 times faster than gas, 8 1/2 times faster than electricity, and are cheaper to run; a burner with an invisible flame, it needs no chimney, and is so small you can carry it under your arm; a hot-air system with a furnace like a jet engine, it distributes heat through ducts only two inches in diameter; a more conventional furnace, also chimneyless, that is said to use a third less fuel than an ordinary burner; a burner for your present furnace that eliminates noisy flame pulsation.

Two of the new burners are said to utilize fuel at better than 99 percent efficiency.

In his speech Ward also stressed that oil is the leading fuel in North Carolina, being used in over 50% of the homes. Last year more than 60% of new home construction in North Carolina installed oil heat. The reason, cited Ward, is that fuel oil has proved successful over the years through features of accessibility, ample supply, efficiency, fully automatic, cleanliness, safety and freedom of choice.

The method of atomization:

that is, mixing air and oil under pressure is more or less the principle by which today's modern burners operate. This system was developed in 1875 and patented by David Burrell of Little Folks, N. Y., in 1885.

Of Course "Do you believe that awful story they are telling about Alice?" "Of course I do. What is it?"
