A LIFT FOR TODAY

Be reconciled to thy brother.—Matt. 5:24.
The body of all true religion consists in obedience to the will of God, in confidence in his declarations and imitation of his perfections toward a lost world.

Merciful One, help us to grow daily in love and goodwill.

Peace No 'Danger'

It would be a sad state of affairs if the world had to go on spending $120 billion annually for armaments, as it does today, just to keep the economy from turning topsy-turvy. It is encouraging that a group of nine experts, including Communists and capitalists, has decided that world peace could come without serious consequences.

"All problems and difficulties of transition could be met by appropriate national and international measures," said the United Nations group, which included representatives of the United States and the Soviet Union, along with men from seven other nations.

Some people have wondered what would happen to our missile, airplane, electronics and other industries producing for defense, should Khrushchev "declare" a real peace instead of the phony one he is always talking about.

Obviously there would be much disruption in many communities dependent largely on defense contracts. But Russia would have as great a problem as we, if not a greater one.

Actually, the problem of reconversion would be much simpler than it was after World War II, the U.N. experts pointed out. In the late years of that conflict, the United States poured 40 per cent of its gross national product into armaments. Now the $50 billion a year spent for defense represents only 10 per cent of the GNP.

Of course, there was a great unfulfilled demand for goods at the end of the war. This made it possible to dispose of large numbers of automobiles and other goods the people had not been able to buy during the war. In this country, at least, that demand has been pretty well satisfied since 1945.

But the world needs good, commodities and services of all kinds which could be satisfied if 8 to 9 per cent of all the world's production were not devoted to preparation for possible war. It would take super planning to finance the satisfaction of these needs and find jobs for some 50 million persons now enrolled in the armies of the world or engaged in making arms. But it could be done.

The U.N. experts said priorities would have to be established among the competing demands for the wealth and manpower released by disarmament. Some of the wealth could go to higher pay, lower taxes and shorter work weeks. Education, housing, health and increased care for the aged would take a share of diverted money and energy. Research for peaceful purposes, such as travel in outer space, exploration of the Arctic and Antarctic and climate control, could claim scientists now engaged in the arms race. Possible tripling of aid to underdeveloped nations was mentioned.

It is nice to know that the experts think we could afford peace, if it were possible. —The (Portland) Oregonian.

Law Breakers, Accident Makers

We've often said that "law breakers are accident makers," and now there's reliable proof to back it up.

In a report coming out of the State Department of Motor Vehicles there is good evidence that disregard of the traffic laws is commonplace among the state's two million licensed drivers.

In a column marked "Important circumstances and conditions," the agency's traffic experts show that 78 percent of North Carolina's 60,000 wrecks last year were caused by drivers who violated a traffic law.

The same experts have said time and again that a definite relationship exists between traffic violations and traffic accidents. This fact, we suspect, is about the only thing that will tend to convince lawbreakers of the error of their ways.

An "anything goes if you can get away with it" attitude poses a grave problem to traffic safety people. It's an obvious impossibility for state troopers to patrol every mile of every road all the time. And people of this type aren't going to obey the rules when

SOMEWHERE IN FLORIDA—

Shucks, my ego took a sudden toboggan slide Thursday. When leaving for Elizabeth City to be married, I noticed a lot of flags out in the business section, and thought they were to celebrate my wedding day. But upon arriving at the armory, a lot of people were on hand, so that I realized the flags were out in connection with Edenton's Trade Fair. And being out of town on a honeymoon during the Trade Fair, here's hoping it was a big success.

And speaking about a honeymoon, I've taken particular notice that folks in South Carolina, Georgia and Florida capitalize on what they have to show the tourist. Of course, the sights are worth seeing, but then Edenton has some historical sites which are equally as interesting and appealing to the tourist.

I'll try to get up with Parson Ashley at St. Augustine before going further into Florida. Many in Edenton will remember that Parson Ashley was a former rector at St. Paul's Church and on a previous visit some years ago he was very happy to see me and was a very gracious host. However, I'm bound to go to the Fountain of Youth, and while there I'm planning on drinking a double portion of that thar water. I surely don't want to come home using a cane.

Then, too, I'm planning to skip over to Silver Springs to watch the fish from a glass-bottomed boat. I've been unable to catch any fish around Edenton lately and maybe I'll be able to learn a little about their habits.

Anyway, a honeymoon is a good way to get a much needed rest, but the bad part of it is to look ahead a little and realize how much work will pile up to be done upon arriving home.

One interesting occasion on my way to Florida was taking a boat ride at Cypress Gardens near Charleston, S. C. The good part about it was that a colored man paddled the boat all over the place, so that I and the new Missus sat back and took it easy. The only trouble was that the colored boat paddler didn't provide a fishing line—on account of no fishing is allowed.

Spending a night at Jacksonville Beach it's wonderful to go to sleep to the tune of the mighty Atlantic pounding its waves on the beach. And to look out over the great expanse of water and note the fury of the waves, one can but marvel at a wonderful work of nature and realize the insignificance of man. And speaking about nature, the beautiful flowers in the azalea gardens near Wilmington and other places in South Carolina and Georgia are far more beautiful than the most noted artists could paint.

There's one regret I've had while in Florida. Quite a few Edenton people live in various parts of Florida and I went away from Edenton without jotting down their addresses so that I could go to see 'em.

Here's one who missed the Town Council meeting Wednesday night, one of the very few times I've been absent. But I could not but think of the meeting, although I was able to go to bed when I got good and ready.

Who in the dickens feels like writing enough to fill this column while on a honeymoon? Heading for a dip in the Atlantic, where I might be when Pete Manning is putting this in type.

they're not being watched.

The result is that these problem children of the highways are causing traffic accidents every working day and Sunday.

What they fail to understand is that nobody gets away with highway lawlessness indefinitely. If the troopers don't catch up with them, the law of averages assuredly will. They always take just one chance too many and wind up in a wreck of their own making.

Drivers should realize that traffic laws are on their side and should know and obey them. It's a moral responsibility to do so.

Yet many otherwise substantial citizens lay aside this morality and treat traffic laws casually, even ignore them when it's inconvenient to comply.

If anyone had an easy solution to this problem, our traffic death rate would fall appreciably. So far, though, there's no prospect of anyone painlessly injecting a sense of responsibility into drivers. Instead we'll have to rely on the tried and true methods of education and enforcement.

If such drivers can be persuaded one way or the other that they are likely to suffer because of their irresponsible conduct, maybe they'll act more intelligently behind the wheel.

Plans Complete For Week-end Revivals

To Be Held At Center Hill and Great Hope Baptist Churches

The Rev. Henry V. Napier, pastor of the Center Hill and Great Hope Baptist Churches, has announced week-end revivals to be held in both churches. At Great Hope the week-end revival begins on Friday night, April 13, at 8 o'clock with the pastor bringing the message. On Saturday night at 8 o'clock the Rev. Robert Harrell, Promotional Secretary for the Chowan Baptist Association, will bring the message. On Sunday, April 15, there will be a special morning worship service at 10 o'clock and the evening message will be brought by the Rev. Jesse Ray Mansfield, pastor of the Hickory Baptist Church, Whitakers, N. C. Jesse Ray is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mansfield of Route 1, Hertford, and is a former member of the Great Hope Baptist Church. On Monday and Tuesday nights at 8 o'clock, the pastor of the church will conclude the week-end revival. The church choir will have charge of the music and the church pianists, Mrs. Jack Sutton and Mrs. C. T. Mansfield will accompany them. The public is invited to any or all services.

Dates for the week-end revival at Center Hill Baptist Church are as follows: Beginning on Wednesday, April 18, at 8 o'clock with the message by the pastor. On Thursday, April 19, there will be a special candlelight observance of The Lord's Supper for all Christian brothers and sisters. On Friday night the message will be brought by the Rev. Leonard Gerrard, pastor of the Hobbsville and Sandy Cross Baptist Churches. On Saturday night there will be a special service of dedication led by the pastor. On Easter Sunday there will be a special morning worship service at 9 o'clock and the regular evening worship service at 8 o'clock which will close out the week-end revival there. The Church Choir will present special music accompanied by the pianist, Jackie Boyce. A special prelude of familiar hymns will be presented each evening for 15 minutes prior to the start of the service by Mrs. Wilbur Privott. The public is reminded of these services and invited to attend.

man and Joe Conger, Jr., president of the Edenton Chamber of Commerce. A concert by the John A. Holmes High School Band preceded the opening. The opening was covered by WITN-TV, Washington, N. C., and local radio station WCDJ. WCDJ also had a number of broadcasts during the two days from the fair.

The Trade Fair was sponsored by the merchants committee of the Edenton Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with local merchants. Twenty-one merchants had outstanding booth exhibits inside the armory with six businesses displaying farm equipment, boats and automobiles outside.

The Ink Spots, engaged by the Chamber of Commerce, proved popular with the crowds as did local talent that performed. A fashion show Friday night was another highlight of the entertainment.

Mayor Levin Culpepper of Elizabeth City, attended the fair Thursday afternoon and praised Edenton for having the promotion and wished success for the event.

In speaking of the success of the fair, Chairman Earnhardt praised his co-chairmen, John Ricks and Johnny Goodwin, as well as other committee chairman, including H. A. Campen, entertainment; Henry Quinn, finance; Johnny Woolard, staging, and Hector Lupton and Dick Schuman, publicity.
