Health For All

Not Unusual Enough
Last year, Jim, a college student, was trying to move a refrigerator in the kitchen of his campus apartment. Suddenly he coughed and blood came up. He sat down to rest but the blood kept flowing.

He thought of tuberculosis but dismissed the idea. After all, he hadn't felt weak, or coughed up any blood before. He hadn't been running a temperature, nor had he lost any weight. He didn't even have a cough. But obviously something was very much wrong. He went to a doctor. The diagnosis? A well-advanced case of active tuberculosis.

It took months in a TB hospital and a long convalescence before Jim was well again. When he returned to his classes, he took more than usual interest in the poetry of John Keats, who died of TB at an early age.

Jim's story isn't as unusual as it should be. In a recent year there were almost 55,500 new active cases of tuberculosis reported. All told, there are 250,000 cases of active TB in the U. S. right now.

TB could be wiped out in this country if we could find all the people ill with active TB and get them treated adequately. It is urgent that we detect and treat all active TB cases now because TB germs resistant to the anti-tuberculosis drugs are developing rapidly. In a few years it may be too late. We shall have lost our chance to wipe out this dread scourge. If tuberculosis is found in its earliest stages, it is easiest to cure. You can do your part. Get an annual TB check-up—tuberculin test or chest X-ray for yourself and your whole family.

Now every field is clothed with grass, and every tree with leaves; now the woods put forth their blossoms, and the year assumes its gay attire.

—Virgil.

Let's go to Church Sunday

Sunday School Lesson

TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE
International Sunday School Lesson for July 1, 1962.

Memory Selection: "Why do you call me 'Lord, Lord,' and not do what I tell you?" Luke 6:46.

Lesson Text: 2 Kings 22 and 23

Today's lesson is the first in a five-session unit entitled "A People in Peril". The aim of the unit is to help adults evaluate their lives and society in terms of obedience to God's will.

Our studies today will reveal to us an inspiring story of the rediscovery of the meaning of Christianity. When Josiah came to the throne, Israel had been subject to Assyria. This political domination had led to infiltration by foreign religions; and when Josiah read the requirements of the law as found in the book and compared them with the religious practices of the people of the day, he was shocked at how far they were from meeting those requirements. His reform took the direction of trying to bring the practices in line with the requirements.

PAYING GOD'S DEBT

Two centuries ago a glassmaker in Pennsylvania provided the land for the erection of a church. But he attached a string to his gift. Each year the congregation must pay to him, or to his descendants, one red rose, forever.

Annually in a traditional service the members of that church fulfil the terms of their deed. In the words of a reverent visitor, "God's rent is paid in coin more worthy than man's."

What strange thrust of imagination devised such a price. Certainly it was more than a man's love of roses. . . . Wisely he realized our tendency to take for granted our blessings. Fervently he prayed that we would forever treasure the privilege of worship. Gently he reminds us that there is beauty and happiness in every sacrifice for the support of God's House.

SCHOOL AND YOUR CHILD

By John Corey, Appalachian State Teachers College

One Can Travel Far in His Hometown

If you can, travel with your children this summer to faraway places. Distant journeys are educational and pleasurable. But if your schedule prevents long trips, don't feel like a "stick in the mud"—travel widely in your own community backyard!

The reward is similar or greater, says Dr. Ben H. Horton, chairman of the education department at Appalachian State Teachers College, Boone, N. C.

Dr. Horton recalls Henry Thoreau's famous statement, "I have traveled a good deal in Concord."

The Massachusetts writer meant, of course, that much territory can be covered in one's own hometown and much can be learned and enjoyed.

The idea still holds true, states Dr. Horton.

Things to do and places to see are extensive in one's home area.

A week-end visit to a farm to see barnyard animals and crops, for instance, is highly rewarding. Farm life is entirely foreign to many urban youngsters.

Going up for a $5 airplane ride to view the hometown from air can be as awe-inspiring as seeing the Grand Canyon for the first time.

Catching a train at a suburban station and riding the choo-choo back into town provides a learning experience. Few children ride trains anymore.

Inspecting a local jail, hearing a court session, visiting a water plant or going into a police station are a few municipal sites of interest that're available in most communities.

Bicycling to a neighboring town may be an excursion as long remembered as a Disneyland vacation.

Unfamiliar sections in home communities often provide intriguing sightseeing adventures. Many things can be seen better by walking. Thoreau said, "The swiftest traveler is he that goes afoot."

Explorations of nearby rivers, lakes, and woods add up to instructive pleasures.

How about sleeping out in the backyard and studying other worlds in the night skies. Is less seen here than from a sack in Yosemite Park?

And what's wrong with trekking to the country somewhere and dipping in ye' ole swimming hole? Or exploring colorful side roads on the rural scene?

Yes, traveling is broadening and enjoyable, says Appalachian's Dr. Horton. And it can be shared by all whether one goes to the farthest corner of the earth or remains in his hometown.

WISDOM of the Ages

"Unselfishness is a power that lifts a man higher than material success; it is a benediction upon him."
