

God Is God

By TERRY JONES

"Jesus said unto them, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind."

During the time Moses was on Mt. Sinai communing with God the children of Israel began to be restless. They wondered what had happened to their leader to make him stay so many days and nights. Then probably under evil leadership the people gathered together and told Moses' brother Aaron to fashion them a god. They wanted a god they could see and touch. They forgot all Moses had told them about Jehovah God and they forgot about all the times God had helped them.

Soon Moses returned from the Mt. Sinai with the Ten Commandments written on two stone tablets by God. When Moses saw the people singing and dancing to the golden calf they had made he threw the tablets down and broke them. Because of their sin the people suffered greatly.

Three thousand were slain by the sword in one day and God sent a plague on the ones that remained.

Today man has come to the point that he knows better than to fall down and worship a golden idol. But it seems men still have the ability to make gods out of things of the world. Often the teenager makes an image to worship out of his car. A man will put his money or job before God. A woman may worship her house and the things in it. Now we may not realize that we have put another god before the one true God, we often forget the words, "THOU SHALT HAVE NO OTHER GODS BEFORE ME". It was expressed once by a well known person just how foolish men are. It was said that man cannot create one single little worm but he can make gods by the dozen. Anything that we put before God and His work becomes a god of the world.

Stop and think over your life, have you made God step down from His throne to let some god of the world reign in your life? Keep in mind that God is God; He is supreme over all. He knows every latest world crisis, but He also knows every problem of a small child. This is your God, don't forsake Him.

Look upon every day as the whole of life, not merely as a section and enjoy and improve the present without wishing, through haste, to rush on to another. —Jean Paul Richter.

Effect Of Offeror's Death
Brown, residing in North Carolina, wrote White, residing in Texas, offering to sell him for $5,000 a horse known as "Nelly." The letter containing the offer was mailed from North Carolina on October 1, and it was received in Texas on October 5. On October 6, White deposited a letter of acceptance in a street letter box. An hour earlier, unknown to White, Brown died from a heart attack. Must the executors of Brown's estate deliver the horse to White?

No. There is no contract. An offer is terminated by the death of either party prior to the acceptance.

The purported acceptance occurred in this case the moment the letter of acceptance was dropped in the street letter box. A letter of acceptance is mailed when it is put in the hands of an authorized post office employee or in a receptacle under the exclusive control of the post office. It must, of course, be properly stamped and addressed.

The offeror died one hour before the mailing of the letter of acceptance. There is no contract in this case, because the minds of the contracting parties must be in existence as of the time the contract is consummated. If one of the parties is dead as of this moment, it is impossible to have a meeting of the minds.

Male household heads with a year of high school earned almost twice as much per day at farm work as those with only four years of grammar school, the survey showed. The better-educated had steadier employment, earned higher annual wages and more often worked at non-farm jobs.

Average educational level of farm laborers hasn't improved over the past 20 years, the report shows. In 1960, about six of ten U. S. hired farm workers had no more than eight grades of school. Only about one in seven had finished high school.

And in the South, hired farm workers had finished an average of seven years of school. Outside the South, the average was nine years.
