

Rotary Now Leads In Little League

Corvairs and Stokley Edged Out of Elite Positions

The Corvairs and Joe Stokley slipped out of their elite positions atop the Little League standings and hitting, respectively, during three days of play in Bill Hardison's recreation program last week.

Ronnie Harrell, ace pitcher of the Corvairs, was on vacation last week, and his club lost two shut-outs to drop out of a first place tie with the Rotary. The Masury Indians, in the meantime, won two games to move into a virtual tie with the Rotary for the lead.

Stokley, who was called upon to pitch in the place of Harrell, dropped to a third place tie in the batting race, while Phil Lassiter regained the lead he held just a few weeks ago. He is hitting an even .500.

Herky Billings was the only newcomer to the list of top hitters last week. He replaced Harrell, who did not bat enough times to gain him a position.

Mike DeBlois and his Falcons, who were the victims of three losses two weeks ago, lost their fourth straight on Monday last week before bouncing back for an upset over the Corvairs, 2-0, Friday afternoon.

Last week's action in the Little League went as follows:

Monday—The Indians, behind Buddy White, won over DeBlois and the Falcons, 7-5, to edge closer to the lead.

Thursday—White and the Indians moved to within .041 percentage points of the front running Rotary with a 6-0 win over the Corvairs and Stokley.

Friday—DeBlois and the Falcons regained the winning touch by stomping the Corvairs, 23-0, and handing Stokley his second loss in two days.

In the Colt League, the Tigers and Cubs played two games a split, thereby maintaining the Tigers' two game lead in the circuit.

Leading hitters in the Little League, based on 20 times at bat and compiled through last week's action, were as follows:

	AB	H	P
Phil Lassiter	22	11	5
Mike DeBlois	37	17	4
Buddy White	25	11	4

No Comment

By JAMES W. DOUBTHAT, Assistant Vice President, Government Relations Division of the National Association of Manufacturers

NO COMMENT is a report of accidents on the national scale, and does not necessarily reflect TAM policy or position.

Washington—It is becoming more and more evident that what Congress does from now on is the end of the session will be determined to a greater extent than usual by what the Senators and Representatives hear from the people back home.

Members of Congress, with their political future at stake, want as much information as possible with respect to the public's attitude toward President Kennedy's legislation program, his economic views, and his attitude toward business.

This is vitally important at this particular time since the record of all House members and of one-third of the Senators (plus vacancies) will be judged by the voters in the November congressional elections.

A number of legislators firmly believe that public support of Mr. Kennedy's policies is diminishing. This is attributed to a number of developments, including:

1. Mr. Kennedy's economic views—embracing bigger government spending, huge deficits as official administration policy, and minimizing the dangers of inflation—alarmed many persons who believe that continued spending in excess of income is the road to fiscal ruin.

2. The swift descent of stock prices alarmed many persons who believe that this reflected—in substantial measure—lack of confidence by investors in the Administration's economic policies.

3. Mr. Kennedy's legislative program—most of which calls for bigger government spending, more power for the President at the expense of Congress and of state and local governments, and more regimentation of industry and of the people—alarmed many persons fearful of greater centralization of authority in Washington.

4. Mr. Kennedy's action in the steel crisis alarmed many persons who reasoned that other businesses and individuals might be subjected to the same treatment.

Another all-important reason given for a decline in public support of Mr. Kennedy's policies is the growing realization that they do everything but create a favorable climate to encourage the nation's economic growth.

What obviously is needed to restore business confidence—and to bring about essential economic growth—is rejection of most of the Kennedy legislative proposals and enactment instead of a program to provide tax reform (along with adequate depreciation allowances, to curb the monopoly power of labor unions, and to eliminate unnecessary government spending.

Kennedy Legislation Lags
Much of Mr. Kennedy's legislative program is in jeopardy. There is no longer any doubt about this.

Such a situation is highly significant since his party has overwhelming control—numerically—of both the House and the Senate.

There can be only one basic reason for failure of Congress to enact the Kennedy proposals. That basic reason is the demonstrated fact that a major portion of the Kennedy program lacks sufficient public support to bring about congressional approval.

The most significant development in this respect was House rejection of the Kennedy farm bill—despite every conceivable pressure that Mr. Kennedy and his associates could exert upon wavering Representatives in an effort to obtain favorable votes.

The bill, as one member of Congress described it, gave the farmers "a choice between the loss of their freedom or the loss of their farms." A majority of the House refused to go along with the regimentation of farmers sought by Mr. Kennedy.

Congress Unjustly Criticized
Opponents of the Kennedy legislative program are warning their supporters against falling for the propaganda by liberals against a "Do-Nothing Congress."

It is pointed out that a "Do-Nothing Congress"—which refuses to pass undesirable and harmful legislation—is the kind of Congress that really acts in the national interest.

Merchants Plan Two Years Ahead

The annual meetings of the N. C. Merchants Association scheduled to be held in Asheville in June of 1963 and in Winston-Salem in May of 1964.

This decision was made at a special meeting of the organization's Convention Site-Date Committee headed by G. M. Casper of Thomasville.

The association's board of directors will be asked in August to approve the recommendations.

Committee members explained that the shortage of "adequate hotel facilities in the convention months of May and June" had prompted the early plans for the 1963 and 1964 meetings.

Rocky Hock Team Suffers Defeat At Hands Of Colerain

Orioles' Streak of Victories Snapped After Winning 12 Straight Games

The Rocky Hock Orioles lost their first game in over a month Sunday afternoon when only eight players showed up and Colerain defeated them 4-1.

The Chowan team had beaten Creswell, 5-1, Friday night to run their winning streak to 12 games and take a firm hold on first place in the Roanoke-Chowan League.

Zackie Harrell suffered his first loss of the year Sunday when he ran into a Colerain Club that could do nothing wrong. On top of that, the Orioles turned up a man short and had to draft spectator Willis Bond to fill the vacant position. Harrell had won five previous games.

With such hitters as Ted Chappell and Marvin Ashley out of the line-up, the Orioles managed only four hits, and Jeff Ward had two of them. Harrell gave up eight safeties to Colerain.

On Friday of last week, the Orioles were in fine form behind the pitching of Web Gould. Gould went seven innings, gave up two hits and struck out 13 batters before being relieved by Harrell after the seventh. Harrell gave up a run to Creswell in the ninth.

Rocky Hock was scheduled to entertain Colerain Wednesday night, Friday they host Windsor, and Sunday afternoon they go to Windsor.

The Orioles' record as of Tuesday morning was 12-2. A complete computation of the standings in the Roanoke-Chowan League was not available early this week.

Four Young Men In Army Training

The local National Guard unit announced early this week that four young men of the area have reported to Fort Jackson, S. C., to complete six months of active duty training.

Cecil Fry, Jr., and Boots Lassiter of Edenton and Edward L. Boyce and Raleigh L. White of Hobbville left Tuesday morning for the Army installation, where they will receive basic and advanced infantry training.

After completing the active duty, Lassiter, Boyce and White will serve the remainder of their military obligation with the local combat support company, while Fry is assigned to Company A in Windsor.

Congress Sees Effects Of Bridge-Tunnel

bridge-tunnel crossing at the mouth of Chesapeake Bay. Its downward movement is caused by compaction of a peat bog beneath the bay bed.

Consulting engineers for the bridge-tunnel discovered the bog when they bored test holes in the bottom before construction started. The peat, 10 to 30 feet thick, was trapped between layers of clay above and below it.

Contractors sank sand drains and deep wells to drain water out of the bog and provide a firm foundation for the island.

Each of the four man-made islands will contain about 1,500,000 tons of sand, 300,000 tons of rock, cost about $5,000,000 to build and will have eight acres of surface at the top, 30 feet above the water. They are being constructed to provide entrances into two mile-long tunnels under major shipping channels.
