

OUR SOIL ★ OUR STRENGTH

Summer Cover Crop

David Lee Hollowell is planning on sowing Hairy Indigo on 13 acres that he has in the Feed Grain Program. Your land that you have put in the Feed Grain Program still needs a good cover crop on it to prevent weeds from taking over. Good cover crops add a tremendous amount of organic matter to the soil and this improves the soil's tilth, structure and fertility. Hairy Indigo is a fairly new plant for our section. It is a very good summer cover crop on sandy land and it doesn't make seed this far north. In the past it has been difficult to locate seed, but they will be available locally this year. Indigo can be seeded in truck crops before the last cultivation and it will start growing after the crops are harvested. The recommended rate of seeding is 8-10 lbs. per acre. Other good summer cover crops are annual lespedeza, sesbania, soybeans, cowpeas, sudan, millet and wildlife food mixtures.

Soil and Water Conservation Districts

Chowan County Soil and Water Conservation Supervisors Lloyd C. Bunch, H. Fahey Byrum and Joe Webb, Jr., will attend the Northeastern Area Supervisors meeting in Williamston on Tuesday, April 16. Area-wide objectives and plans will be discussed and formulated at this meeting.

Soil and water conservation districts are legally constituted units of State Government created by you to administer soil and water conservation work within its boundaries, and they are not branches of any agency or of the Federal Government. Districts are self-governed by a board of publicly elected local people called supervisors. They are your elected representatives to plan and carry out a district wide program of conservation.

The district program within the state and county is carried out to some extent through annual appropriations of the State Legislature; however most of the support has to be obtained from the individual counties, organizations, agencies and individuals. It is their responsibility to provide technical assistance to you from all possible sources. They have working agreements with the Soil Conservation Service, North Carolina Division of Forestry, North Carolina State Highway Commission and others to do this. Assistance is also provided by other agencies. All work toward the same goal; conservation of our natural resources.

Washington—The congressional drive to prune President Kennedy's massive spending program is achieving some encouraging results—and some powerful support.

Sensing the temper of Congress, Mr. Kennedy himself trimmed $400,000 million from the amount he had planned to request for foreign aid.

His special message to Congress sought $4.5 billion—which compares with $3.9 billion approved for the current fiscal year. An additional cut will be sought.

Powerful support for the bipartisan economy effort came from former President Eisenhower and from Senator Byrd (D-Va.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Mr. Eisenhower urged Congress to lop more than $13 billion from the $107.9 billion of new spending authority sought by Mr. Kennedy.

Economy advocates believe such action would reduce actual spending in 1964 by at least $4.5 billion.

This would mean holding 1964 spending to the 1963 level—which the economy advocates regard as a rather "lush" level and having no resemblance whatever to austerity.

Pointing out that Mr. Kennedy's $107.9 billion request was $27 billion higher than the last Eisenhower budget (submitted to Congress in January, 1961), the former President asserted that "major surgery" is essential.

"If this $27 billion increase were cut in half," he said, "we would still have the fastest growing budget we have ever had in peacetime."

Of particular interest were his views on defense spending—a subject on which he is a world-recognized authority. He said: "Take Defense—up $10 billion in two years. In my view, it is almost incredible to say this program cannot be safely pared. The Defense budget I left behind provided amply for our security. Even allowing for costly developments since then, I have no doubt that the enormous Defense sums can well stand a judicious and sizeable pruning."

Senator Byrd—another recognized authority on government spending—also urged Congress, in order to protect the nation's fiscal solvency, to trim substantially Mr. Kennedy's spending program.

Here are his recommendations: "In view of the continuing and worsening deficit financing state of federal fiscal affairs, the excessive spending record over the years, and the size and character of the President's January spending proposals for the coming year, I earnestly suggest that:

"The $107.9 billion in budget requests for new appropriations and other spending authority now pending before Congress be reduced by a minimum of $12 billion.

"The $98.8 billion budget expenditure estimate for the fiscal year beginning July 1 be reduced by a minimum of $7.1 billion."

Senator Byrd pointed out that $87.2 billion of unspent appropriations—plus the $107.9 billion of new spending authority—would provide Mr. Kennedy with a total of $195.1 billion for future expenditures after July 1.

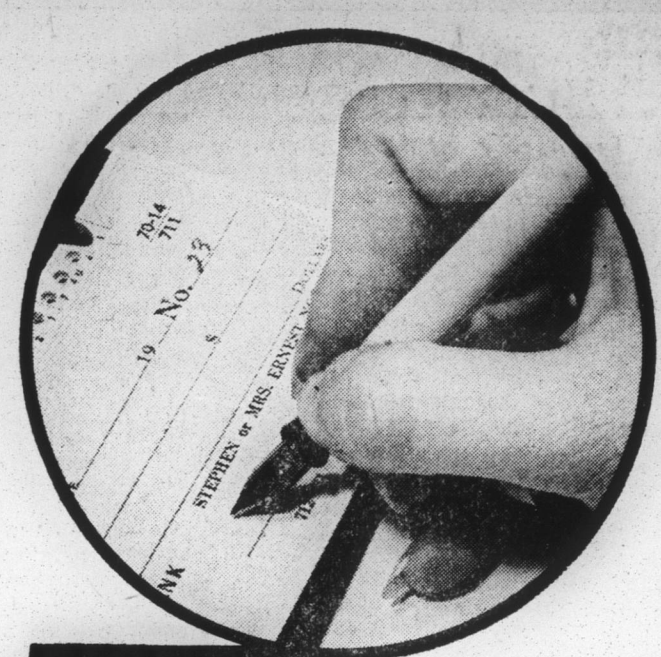

"This sum," he commented, "is almost beyond comprehension."

TRAILWAYS EDENTON BUS STATION

25 YEARS AGO

TODAY

There've Been Some Big Changes Made

The bus at the top was fine for 1938. It made frequent stops, operated on two lane roads, and encountered little traffic.

Today's bus is designed to run hundreds of miles without stops. Its motor is more powerful, yet quieter; and the coach is air conditioned, rest-room equipped.

But one thing is the same—the Trailways spirit of neighborliness and helpfulness to the traveler. This spirit, we feel, is why Trailways has grown in service to your community and the nation.
