Bridge-Tunnel Topic At Edenton Meeting

fair share of traffic that will soon be utilizing this new 17 1/2 mile span across Chesapeake Bay.

Guest speaker at the Highway Committee meeting was R. S. Holland, Norfolk, of the Virginia Highway Commission, who outlined present and future road construction in the Tidewater area to handle the Chesapeake Bay bridge-tunnel traffic, with the assistance of a large map. Mr. Holland stated that these roads would probably prove adequate for the first year or two, but the state of Virginia would be spending multi-millions of dollars in the future to construct the tremendous complex of highways in and around Norfolk. He urged members of the group to get busy now to promote U. S. 17 or a few years from now this area would find itself neglected by the tourists who would prefer the faster routes of 301 and interstate 95 to the west. The difference would be to create something attractive for the tourists.

Mr. Holland was introduced by Gilliam Wood, North Carolina First District Highway Commissioner. Mr. Wood also emphasized the need for immediate plans to make the area as attractive to tourists as possible and to advertise the enviable position such as this area holds in colonial history.

Buxton White of Elizabeth City, known as the "Albemarle Gardener," proposed that the Albemarle area highway group endorse and promote beautification of the Dismal Swamp Canal along U. S. 17 in North Carolina, making upon its banks an outstanding floral garden.

which would become an added attraction for tourists in the Albemarle section.

Others in attendance who contributed ideas to increase the tourist business in the Albemarle area were Mrs. Lucille Winslow of Dare County, Mrs. Carrie Earnhardt, Historyland Association director and Shelton Moore, state vice president of the Ocean Highway Association.

On a motion proposed by Mayor Levin Culppepper of Elizabeth City, the group voted to endorse the creation of the North Carolina Turnpike Authority who plan a toll road on the Outer Banks from the Virginia line to Duck, N. C.

Those present from Edenton included, in addition to the committee chairman, W. P. "Spec" Jones, were Gilliam Wood, Mayor John A. Mitchener, George A. Byrum, president of the Edenton Chamber of Commerce; West W. Byrum, vice president of the Chamber; W. E. Bond, chairman of the County Commissioners, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. P. Earnhardt, Shelton Moore, Tom Shepard, James M. Robinson, Miss Carol Ann Phelps, Chamber secretary and Bill Cozart.

SENATOR Sam Ervin SAYS

Washington — The legislative calendar and how long Congress will be in session considering it were subjects of a Senate discussion by Majority Leader Mansfield last week. As he outlined an eight-point legislative program, the Majority Leader voiced the opinion that there is a lot of legislation yet to be acted upon by the Senate and that it is altogether likely that the Senate will be having Christmas dinner in the Capitol.

The legislative program calendar for the Senate consists of priority measures concerning taxes and civil rights proposals, and other legislation ranging from the question of ratification of the Test Ban Treaty to eight appropriation bills for Departments and agencies yet to be brought to the floor in this body. Then, there is the third consideration of the national debt limitation for the Treasury. The debt limitation signifies the deep concern which Congress has over the proposed spending and tax policies advocated in hearings before the committees. Earlier this year Congress raised a temporary and expiring $305 billion debt ceiling to a temporary $309 billion ceiling to expire August 30. Last week this expiration date was extended to November 30 with the certainty that Congress will be asked to review the problem again before that date.

Among the other proposals which are likely to produce debate are school aid programs and the controversial foreign aid bill, both of which were listed in the Majority Leader's list of pending bills. As this column is written, it appears that Congress may have to take up legislation to deal with an impending rail strike. All of these bills present complex problems and most of them would have an impact of great proportions on the economy or on national life. The tax bill appears to have a long road ahead and civil rights proposals are certain to bring extended debate when they are brought to the Senate floor.

One of the reasons why Congress is coming more and more to have extended sessions comes over a fundamental clash of philosophies brought about by increasing advocacy of unbalanced budgets, continuance of controversial foreign aid programs at high costs, and requests for tax cuts which fly in the face of budgetary difficulties and long standing financial precepts.

Moreover the new era finds each state, each community, each institution, each business, and each individual looking more and more toward the Federal government to take care of their problems. Once the Federal government does take cognizance of the problem, then the various groups who have problems that are not solved by the helpful legislation feel they must demand governmental steps to compensate them or alleviate some grievance or malfunction of the free economy.

Congress then comes into the position of being asked more and more to perform the function of creating some sort of national guardianship for various groups of Americans, and of creating laws which clash with the legislative powers reserved to the states and the communities or the rights reserved to the individual citizen.

There are areas in which the Federal government must enact legislation to cope with changes of conditions, but I think also that the nation should begin to exercise caution in accepting a philosophy that all problems ought to be laid on the doorstep of the Capitol in Washington. For when this occurs, the people often sadly learn that for a mess of pottage they have lost their birthright of individual liberty.
