

The Roundup

By WILBORNE HARRELL

There's nothing much I can say about, or add to, the recent bombings in Birmingham when four Negro girls were killed, that has not already been written. The enormity of the crime beggars my descriptive powers. So, "No Comment" is about all I can say. With this footnote: There have been 50 such bombings in Birmingham and Alabama, all unsolved. In my opinion, in the face of this breakdown of law and order, and the apparent unwillingness and reluctant cooperation of the authorities, from Governor Wallace on down, the bombers have practically been given the green light—go ahead and kill some more children.

PHIL OSOPHER SAYS—Money can't buy happiness. But the lack of money can buy a lot of misery and unhappiness.

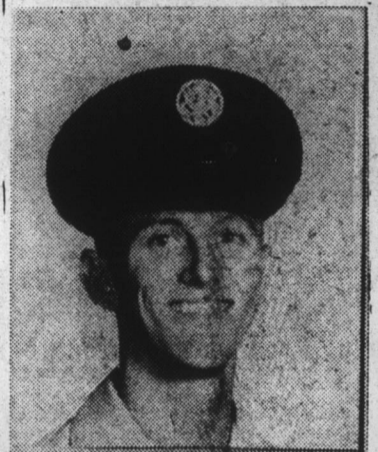

Edenton, I believe, can compete in most things and can compare favorably with her neighboring sisters. But there is one blot on her escutcheon, and to her discredit. There are several fine cates in and around Edenton, but where are they? Out on the outskirts and far removed from the business section. What this town needs, and needs badly, is a cafe, or restaurant easily accessible to the downtown area. Of course, light lunches and snacks can be obtained but you can't buy a substantial meal, unless you walk a mile or own a car. And many people who have been working all day or morning, want more than a sandwich or a bowl of soup. A first-class restaurant or cafe in the heart of Edenton would be a long-needed convenience for the business man, and a sure-fire drawing-card for out-of-town and visitors.

My aversion to profanity is not based on moral grounds, but on esthetic values. In simple language, it just doesn't sound nice and it is very, very impolite. It is utterly without consideration for the sensibilities of others. And the use of "cussing" or profanity may be placed in the same category as slang; it simply shows a woeful lack of a vocabulary or the ability to properly express one's self. When a man can't find the necessary words, he lets loose a few choice "cuss" words or falls back on slang.

—John Paul Jones.

Sent To Mississippi

Airman Billy M. Voliva, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac E. Voliva, 100 East Church Street, Edenton, is being reassigned from Lackland AFB, Texas, to Greenville AFB, Mississippi, for technical training as a United States Air Force fire protection specialist. Airman Voliva is a 1963 graduate of John A. Holmes High School.

Health Careers Congress At ECC

East Carolina College has provided the facilities of Austin Hall for the first annual District VI Health Careers Congress to be held Saturday, October 12. Interested high school students from 27 counties have been invited to attend the one-day program which includes vocational exhibits and a luncheon. Seminars on health careers are also planned for the afternoon session. Featured speaker will be Mrs. Eva Warren, dean of the East Carolina School of Nursing, who will inform the students of the opportunities for rewarding service offered by a health career. The Congress is sponsored by Health Careers for North Carolina as part of a broad plan to help relieve today's critical personnel shortage in the medical and allied professions.

OAK GROVE 4-H CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

The Oak Grove 4-H Club held its monthly meeting Tuesday night, September 24, at the Oak Grove Club House. Thirteen members were present.

New officers were elected during the business transaction. Those elected were: President, Lewis Evans; vice president, Virginia Lane, and secretary-treasurer, Kathryn Roberson.

The reporters and song leaders were also elected. They are Brenda Privott and Woody Parks, reporters, and Carolyn Lane and Lynn Privott, song leaders.

Further business was transacted and the meeting was adjourned.
