Honored At East Carolina College

Governor Terry Sanford congratulates Inglis Fletcher after East Carolina College named a new seven-story women's residence hall for her during the college's 55th commencement exercises Sunday, June 14. Mrs. Fletcher, author of 12 novels about early North Carolina and its people, was present at the commencement program when the naming of Inglis Fletcher Hall was announced. Governor Sanford, also in attendance at the program, praised the choice of Mrs. Fletcher as the new building's honoree, saying the theme of her 12 books in the "Carolina Series" is fundamentally the same as the principle dramatized by East Carolina College: That the real source of strength was created by Congress on June mands of the busy postwar of Eastern North Carolina is inherent in the land itself and its people.
