By WILBORNE HARBELL

Last week I viewed an hour's program on TV presenting a last minute bid for votes by Richardson Preyer...

The moral there is that most political speeches are futile and wasted effort. The candidates underestimate the intelligence of the average voter...

Speaking about the topless bathing suit, around which so much controversy is raging: remember what our grandmothers, or our mothers for that matter, wore on the beaches in their day?

Too much air conditioning is thwarting nature, for it was intended for man to experience some heat in the summer months. A person needs to sweat, he needs to be browned by the sun and not by a synthetic tan out of a bottle. Honest summer perspiration on an honest brow is good for the soul and a purger of the system. But maybe I am biased and prejudiced and my antipathy for air conditioning strictly a personal matter, and not to be construed as criticism or coercion. If you like it—you like it and I grant you your right of choice and the exercise of free will. But you must also grant the same privilege to me. I don't like air conditioning, particularly where employed by the fanatical and rabid devotees of this devil's invention, and by those who can't distinguish between air conditioning and refrigeration.
