

The Roundup

By WILBORNE HARRELL

It seems that Viet Nam has gone coup-coup.

Despite the bad weather we have been having, Spring must not be too far away. The fertilizer companies are beginning their Spring advertising campaigns on TV and in newspapers and magazines. Spring heralds the season of growth and greenery and planting. It is the time for sowing the seeds that will eventually fill the graineries and warehouses and, last but not least, our bellies. Food is the fuel of all things, that makes all things run—from man and then, through man, all machinery and mechanisms. So, planting time is extremely important to our civilization and economy, and it is the lowly and humble fertilizer that puts the show on the road. It is smelly and messy, but it is essential and necessary to man.

QUOTE—"We are hated by all the world," says a friend of mine. I don't entirely agree with my friend, but I will add, that if we continue on our present course of international policy, we will surely isolate ourselves from the friendship of all nations, big and small. And we will become an island in a sea of mistrust, hate and fear.

He Knew The Answers, Too

A bishop met a minister traveling on the same train and before long they got into a conversation which turned on the subject of how the bishop had gotten his vocation.

He explained at length, and then asked the minister to tell the story of his calling. Self-complacently the divine replied in all brevity: "The Lord had need of me."

The bishop knitted his brow in thought, then turned to the young man, "I have read the Bible quite a few times, but so far as I know, there is only one occasion of which the Lord said He had need for anything. At His triumphant entry into Jerusalem, He said He had need of an ass."
