The Roundup

Some birds, like some humans, must have a streak of meanness in their makeup. Some are bullies. I have been throwing out bread crumbs for my feathered friends, and there is one big bird who tries to hog it all, and does his best to drive the other, much smaller, birds away. But the small birds are spunky devils, and I'm sure they get their share. Otherwise I might be tempted to do something about this fine-feathered bully.

Week before last, I opened this column with a quote from Emerson: "Announced by all the trumpets of the sky, arrives the snow." We'd had a little flurry of snow, and I prematurely jumped the gun. I also wrote a quatrain about the snow, which would be more appropos now, but I'll not bore you by repeating it. Suffice to say, it inadequately expressed what we are experiencing now, in the way of one of the worst snow storms in years.

My Stetson is off to the paper carrier boys, who like the mail man, braves the worst kind of weather to bring us our morning paper. I haven't missed getting my paper a single morning yet. Frankly, there were a few mornings when I wished he'd had the gumption to stay home and let the papers go hang.

QUOTE: "Isn't it strange that in this country as prayer goes down, crime goes up?" -Senator Everett Dirksen, commenting on Supreme Court decisions regarding school prayers.
