Camp Easter Now Ready For New Camping Season

SOUTHERN PINES — The 1966 Easter Seal camping season for crippled children began here on Sunday, June 19. This marks the third season of camping for the physically handicapped at Camp Easter in the Pines which is owned by the North Carolina Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

A new unit of four cabins and bathhouse is being readied for use this season. The new unit is in addition to an original cabin-bathhouse complex, a lodge which was built last year, an arts and crafts building, staff house, and a 5-acre lake. A growing interest in the camp and requests to attend provided the impetus for the present building program.

There are three 2-week sessions for crippled children and one 2-week session for adults scheduled this summer.

On crutches, wearing braces and even in wheelchairs, many youngsters will be going to camp for the first time. They will be learning to swim, having their first contacts with nature, getting craft instruction and participating in many of the usual camp activities.

Equally important, handicapped children will have a chance to gain independence, trade experiences with others and make or renew friendships. For many of them, it is a once a year break-away from a secluded life; for all it is an eagerly awaited adventure.

Open house for the public will be held at Camp Easter on Sunday, June 26, from 2 to 4 P. M.

Niran 10-G is up to 22 times more effective against rootworm than other insecticides.

(and costs 60¢ to $1.90 less per acre.)

Based on the best performance of competitive products in Virginia tests, Niran 10-G came through with flying colors. Repeatedly it proved to be as much as 22 times more effective than other insecticides in destroying the southern rootworm in peanuts. In fact, it protected 99.75% of the peanuts in the Virginia tests.

You might expect to pay a premium for the effectiveness of Niran 10-G. But costs of the competitive insecticides used in the Virginia tests actually ranged from 60¢ to $1.90 more per acre than Niran 10-G.

Low-cost Niran 10-G has other advantages, too. It's applied at pegging time, not at planting. It won't damage the peanut plant, so there's no danger of setback by the insecticide application. And there's no residue problem, either. So peanut hay is safe to use for silage. Niran 10-G goes about its business of controlling rootworms, then rapidly breaks down into harmless compounds and disappears.

Like all insecticides, Niran 10-G is a powerful chemical—it has to be to kill rootworms. But Niran 10-G is carefully processed to remove undesirable fine dust and minimize blowing. Be sure to read the directions on the label and follow them exactly. You'll get better results and get them safely.

GET ALL THE FACTS

Niran 10-G is the low-cost, sure way to control rootworms in peanuts. That's why you'll want to get complete details from your nearest insecticide dealer or direct from Monsanto. Write: Monsanto Company, Agricultural Division, St. Louis, Missouri, 63166.
