

Small Business Loans Available

Fred A. Dow, Charlotte regional director, Small Business Administration, has announced that the following counties in North Carolina have been declared disaster areas by the Department of Agriculture, due to excessive rainfall and abnormally cool weather during April, May, and June:

Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Pasquotank and Perquimans.

Any small business firm located in the above counties is eligible for consideration for an SBA Economic Injury Disaster Loan, provided it can show it has suffered substantial economic injury as a result of injury sustained by farmers affected by the excessive rainfall and abnormally cool weather.

Farmers and stockmen are not eligible for financial assistance from SBA under this program but instead, should apply to the Farmers Home Administration.

The authority to accept applications under this program will expire on July 31, 1967.

Inquiries regarding assistance under this program may be addressed to: Small Business Administration, Room 301—201 South Tryon Street, Charlotte, N. C. 28202.

pense-paid, 30-day trip around the world to be awarded as grand prize in the August-September-October model home showing. In addition, a brand new RCA Victor Nu-Vista Color TV set will be awarded to one of the model home visitors here.

After inspecting the new model, Price commended the local Family-Tailored Homes builder for his model home selection, its location and the quality of construction workmanship. "Certainly, area visitors will discover a world of exciting features for luxury living in this brand new three-bedroom Colonial home. It is typical of the type of values that continue to attract American families and make Family-Tailored Homes the 'best-sellers' of any nationally advertised brand name home in the country," Price said.

Price pointed out that one of the objectives of the Family-Tailored Homes open house promotion here is to expose the new ideas in homes to the entire community, regardless of immediate desires to purchase homes. "We want every family in the area to see the new Family-Tailored Homes models so that they can discover the world of changes that are taking place in the American home today. We're building a new personality into the family home. Like other builders in this community and all over the United States, Twiddy is helping to reshape the destiny of American cities and towns and the living standards of American families with new home concepts."

"The grand old house of a century ago, even 50 or 30 years ago, doesn't begin to measure up to the family needs of today or even the community needs. They were built to last, but not for lasting living. They were personality homes, built to suit the personalities of families who first moved into them and filled with the personality of built-in splendors that have long been obsolete. By today's standards they have wasted space, poor organization for the busy housewife and would cost the average family a fortune to maintain."

"Today's builders must visualize the home as a part of a growing American community. It must fit into the community today and 50 years from now, but more important, it must fit the concepts of a rapidly improving and changing standard of American family living. The new house today must have personality—not the personality of a one-family occupant or built-in fashions that will soon be obsolete. Its personality must be reflected in the needs of a family living. The idea of designing your own home is becoming more and more unrealistic. Today's buyer isn't a one-home buyer. Today's family is desirous of improving its income and its social position. Today's family wants to be able to make the move to a new home that is more in keeping with these changes. In order to do this, the home presently owned must have resale value that allows recovery of the investment."

"Essentially, this is what we're trying to accomplish with Family-Tailored Homes. Our homes are designed around family living. We have incorporated into Family-Tailored Homes many of the luxury-living features that home buyers want as the result of our nationwide consumer research. These are features, however, that will not date the house or make it obsolete so that resale value is lost. They are such ideas as more spacious closets with bi-fold doors and overhead storage, maintenance-free exteriors, built-in bathroom vanities with marble tops, double access bathrooms, quiet zoned bedroom areas, formal and informal family living areas, economical central heating systems. These and other features are all part of the house the Family-Tailored Homes builder offers. We are tailoring our homes for family living and providing the selection of home styles and designs from which a family can choose a home tailored to fit its individual needs and budget."

Survey Underway At Bear Swamp

The landowners in the Bear Swamp Watershed have taken another step toward obtaining the needed improvements in their 20,410 acre watershed. A preliminary cost estimate survey was begun a few days ago by a Soil Conservation Service watershed planning party.

In the picture, Archie Lane, chairman of the Bear Swamp Drainage District Committee, is shown on the right discussing the watershed improvement plans with the surveyors. The watershed is located near Center Hill in Perquimans and Chowan Counties.

The local group consisting of 95 landowners made application for assistance in making the necessary improvements under the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act in January. This application was approved by the State Soil and Water Conservation Committee.

Now a detailed watershed work plan has to be developed and approved by the local landowners and the government before work can proceed.

Under the program, the needed land treatment measures such as conservation cropping systems, cover cropping, crop residue management, field border plantings, woodland management, wildlife habitat development will be installed.

Most of the improvements will be made on a cost sharing basis with the Federal Government and the local people sharing the cost.

The drainage commission, Lane, Dr. T. P. Brinn from Hertford and Carlton Goodwin of Center Hill, are coordinating the activities of the project.

GOLF BAG

If you are going to carry many rods an old golf bag makes the job easy. Good for storing rods, too.

RETRIEVE DUCKS

Store a bicycle tube (deflated) in your pocket when you go duck shooting. If you have to retrieve a duck inflate tube, tie to string and throw over dead duck. The rest is easy.

TAPED

Hunting in foul weather or where hard use may send dirt or straw down the gun's barrel? Place a strip of cellophane tape over the muzzle. First shot blows it harmlessly away.
