Keep Year's Resolution
Last year Mrs. John Cox, Tyrrell County, made a resolution to refinish 20 pieces of family furniture. By December she had completed her project.

According to Mrs. Ann E. Davenport, extension home economics agent, Mrs. Cox became interested in refishing furniture by attending extension home economics workshops. In addition, she has always been interested in antiques and has inherited some lovely pieces from the Cox family.

Although she has had many chances to sell these family heirlooms, Mrs. Cox naturally refused to do so. She has double pride in these items: not only are they family owned; they are also family refinished.

Mrs. Davenport notes that Mr. Cox and daughter Sue helped Mrs. Cox with the year long endeavor.

Receives Meritorious Service Award
Mrs. Garland Hicks, a 4-H leader in Rutherford County, received a Meritorious Service Award for her contribution to the county's program.

According to Mrs. Mildred S. Stallings, home economics extension agent, the Hicks' adopted two boys, Jimmy and Roger, 10 years ago. The two boys have been models in 4-H achievement because their mother and father took the time to be leaders and give them and other children of the community the benefits of the 4-H program. In addition,

Mrs. Hicks offered leadership to her church, her community development club and the county fair.

"The Meritorious Award is a person award given by the 4-H Leaders' Council," Mrs. Stallings notes.

Program Saves Lives
"We hope the safety program of the Beaver Dam 4-H Club saved lives, prevented accidents and made people more safety conscious," Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ward, leaders of the Duplin County club, state.

Here are just some of the projects the club conducted during its safety campaign: Members cleaned away nails, broken glass and other hazards from home surroundings. They collected old newspapers. They studied water safety and contributed 200 "No Swimming" and "Deep Water" signs to farm pond owners. They studied highway safety and safety with tools and farm equipment.

"By carrying out these activities and many more, the 4-H members hope to have made their community a safer place to live," Mrs. Lois G. Britt, assistant home economics extension agent, notes.

Green Grow The Collards
"Mrs. D. A. Monroe, Route 1, Laurinburg, Scotland County, is not letting space around her house lay idle," Brenda J. Beam, assistant home economics extension agent, observes.

Each year, Mrs. Monroe has lovely petunias at the back of her house and next to the house. After the petunias bloomed this year, Mrs. Monroe removed them and set collards in their place. The result: Mrs. Monroe had some greenery around her house and at the same time she did not have far to go to obtain collards for a good meal.

Farmers Invited To 'Corn Clinic'
The "Eastern Belt Corn Clinic" will be held at the College of the Albemarle in Elizabeth City on Wednesday, January 25.

From the opening concert by the Elizabeth City High School Band at 9 A. M. through the panel discussion period, the present and future trends and practices involved in producing a bumper crop of corn will be discussed. While the topics presented will be varied, they will include: Minimum tillage, narrow rows, early and thick planting, single and three-way cross hybrids, the value of proper amounts of lime and fertilizer, and harvesting corn. Also at the end of the program a panel of experts will answer questions submitted by the attending farmers.

While the program is a first for the area the concept was begun in the mid-western corn belt in early 1965 and proved to be very successful. Early indications are that the goal of 1,500 farmers for the Eastern Belt Corn Clinic will be exceeded.

This program was conceived, developed and will be presented by commercial interests drawing from their own vast knowledge and research experience. These people are well qualified to present their story.

A complimentary lunch will be served and door prizes drawn during the day.

All interested corn farmers are invited to attend the first clinic. It is sponsored by A'lis-Chalmers, DeKalb Agricultural Association, Mobil V-C Fertilizer, Butler Manufacturing Company, the American Potash Institute, James River Limestone Products and their local dealers throughout Eastern North Carolina and Eastern Virginia. See your local dealer for your complimentary ticket.
