Rep. Walter B. Jones Reports From Washington

Last week the House passed the Military Construction Bill calling for an appropriation of $2.37 billion, including in this amount, $92,000 for troop housing at Cape Hatteras and $5,439,000 for general purposes at the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point.

Another bill considered by the House, but with no final vote, was one which appropriates $50 million to permit the United States Attorney General to improve local police departments. I intend to vote against this bill for I am convinced that no amount of money will help enforce law and order until such time as the Supreme Court and the lesser federal courts change their concept of justice and consider the rights of law-abiding citizens, and stop releasing confessed criminals on mere legal technicalities. It is time that we emphasize the protective rights of the innocent rather than the technical rights of the criminal. I hope my vote will be interpreted as a protest to the present liberal concepts of our federal courts.

Under present federal criminal laws, the Department of Justice maintains that it has no federal jurisdiction over riots occurring within state boundaries. In a sincere effort to remedy this situation, I introduced House Bill 11921, which provides that the looting of merchandise during the time of a riot will be a federal offense, punishable by five years in prison and/or a $5,000 fine. The constitutionality of this bill is based on the assumption that the merchandise being looted has traveled in interstate commerce. This is not a reflection on local or state police, but rather a means of providing supplemental law enforcement with the FBI, the Attorney General's office and the U. S. marshals. I am sure this bill will meet strong opposition, for unfortunately, there are those who do not see a disregard for law and order in the riots which are now occurring daily throughout this nation. My bill was not introduced on the basis of race. A far larger percentage of merchants who have been damaged are members of the Negro race. Also, last week I joined with approximately 100 other Congressmen in introducing a resolution which will create a bipartisan commission to study the very serious question of our trade relations with communist nations, either directly or indirectly. It is totally inconsistent that we ship either ammunition or materials to those nations who are doing business directly with North Vietnam. It is strange, indeed, that the State Department continues to honor commercial treaties with those who from time to time criticize, and in some cases, such as the Egyptian nation, actually sever diplomatic relations with the United States.

Committee Elections
The ASCS committee elections will be held by mail this year. Ballots will be mailed to eligible voters about September 8. The voted ballots must be mailed and postmarked or returned in person to the County ASCS office by September 18. The ASC committee boundaries have not been changed from last year.

A slate of nominees will be selected by the present community committee. The county committee may add additional nominees. Others may be added to the slate of nominees by petition if they are found to be eligible and willing to serve if elected. Petitions must be:

1. Limited to one nominee each.
2. Signed by at least six eligible voters in the community. (Eligible voters may sign as many petitions as they desire).
3. Received at the county office by August 24, 1967.

Persons nominated should be (1) currently engaged in the operation of a farm or ranch and (2) well qualified for committee work and willing to serve if elected.

In general a person is eligible to be a community committeeman if he lives in the community in which he is eligible to vote. If a person who is nominated by petition is found to be ineligible, he will be notified and given 15 days in which to appeal to the county committee.

A list of eligible voters in the ASCS committee elections by communities is available in the county ASCS office and is available for public inspection.

Agricultural Conservation Program

Requests are now being accepted in the county ASCS office currently for federal cost-share. Farm operators who intend to carry out a conservation practice this fall should file their requests at the county ASCS office as soon as the type of conservation practice that is needed on the farm has been determined. There is a limited amount of money available at the present time. Consider your conservation needs closely and file your application now while money is available.

Sartain To Participate In Special Program

RALEIGH — His first year in a large university can be a lonely and difficult experience for a boy on his own for the first time.

For 320 freshmen entering North Carolina State University this September, the transition from family hearth to campus challenges will be easier because of a "Living and Learning Program" at the Raleigh campus.

Among those students selected for this special program is Hubert C. Sartain, Route 1, Edenton, and a recent graduate of John A. Holmes High School.

Enrolled in the program are students representing a cross-section — academically, economically and ethnically — of the 10,500 students expected at the university this fall.

The "Living and Learning" participants will live in small dormitories conducive to informal gatherings.

The program was initiated last year as an attempt by NCSU to meet the problems of booming enrollments that sometimes seemed to lose sight of individuals.

Dr. Sidney A. Knowles of the English Department and James L. Walker of engineering mechanics were co-directors of the program during its successful initial year. Patrick W. Weis, assistant director of housing at NCSU, was coordinator.

Knowles explained the objectives of the experiment: "We attempted to whet the students' intellectual appetite and insure their full participation in all phases of university life."

In the dormitory lounge, students met in informal sessions with professors on subjects ranging from philosophy to aerospace engineering.

During coffee conferences, students talked with professors and university officials on an easy, give-and-take basis.

Knowles said that an important part of the experiment was to make extra-curricular and cultural activities available to the students.

Four English classes were held in the dormitory by Professor David B. Kester, who found that students performed better in the friendly atmosphere.

Dean of Students James J. Stewart said of the program, "We consider it a great success. Our wish now is to expand the experiment to embrace more students."

Since the program was so successful with the approximately 80 engineering and liberal arts freshmen who lived in Berry Hall, it has been expanded this year to include another dorm, Becton Hall. Freshmen in three other schools at the university have also been included in the plan.

Co-directors will represent the Schools of Liberal Arts, Engineering, Textiles, Physical Sciences and Applied Mathematics and Agriculture and Life Sciences.

Although students in the same curriculum will room together, those from other schools will live on the hall.

Incoming freshmen received letters explaining the program. Those interested are participating voluntarily.

Students from out of state who will be part of the "Living and Learning" experiment will register in September before classes for the fall session begin.
