

From The Yellowed Pages Of The Chowan Herald

30 YEARS AGO

Information came from Washington to the effect that President Roosevelt had approved a project for the extension of the local fish hatchery, but that the appropriation had been reduced from $25,000 to $19,366.

A fire threatened on the southeast corner of Broad and King Streets put the finger of fate temporarily on The Chowan Herald plant. The blaze, which did an unestimated damage and which was thought may run into several thousand dollars, started on the second floor of Joe Habit's restaurant and beer garden and rapidly had gutted its way to the top floor of The Herald office on East King Street. The fire caused delay in publishing the weekly edition of The Herald.

Though in operation only four months, sales in the Chowan County ABC store showed a total of $31,245.10 to January 1.

A committee from the Lions Club was instructed to meet with the Rotary Holland was eastern Carolina president, announced that plans were under way here in the diversion program operated by the Peanut Stabilization Cooperative call for crushing into oil of hundreds of tons of peanuts.

Auto Industry At New Record

DETROIT — The U. S. motor vehicle industry has recorded another important milestone in its relatively short history with production of its 250 millionth vehicle.

The Automobile Manufacturers Association, which keeps the records for the industry, reports the event occurring in mid-January but said that the exact time and place is impossible to determine. The industry now has 93 assembly plants located in 72 cities and 26 states across the nation with production running as high as 45,000 vehicles daily.

The industry, which dates its beginning in 1896, required 16 years, until 1912, to produce its first million vehicles. But rapidly increased use of vehicles saw this figure climb to 50 million by 1931, only 19 years later. In even less time, the 17 years until 1948, the vehicle marking the 100 millionth rolled off an assembly line.

An expanding economy and improved standard of living produced an ever growing need for highway transportation so that in just 14 more years this figure was doubled. On December 11, 1962, the 200 millionth vehicle was driven from one of the industry's plants.

The industry's production of another 50 million vehicles in less than six years, approximately one-sixth the time required for the first million, points up the nation's continued reliance on cars, trucks and buses and the highway transportation system.

The 250 million total includes nearly 206 million passenger cars and more than 44 million motor trucks and buses.
