

The Roundup

By WILBORNE HARRELL

"Art Before Breakfast" could be a good title for NBC's TODAY show, which comes on, live, at 7 o'clock in the morning. In my opinion, it is one of the best shows on the air. It runs the gamut of art, music, interesting interviews, travel and sports. It is currently steered by Hugh Downs, who has in reality also steered a course across the South Pacific and has written a book about it. From Miami to Tahiti in a 65-foot ketch. A treasure trove of seafaring adventure, the book, A SHOAL OF STARS, carries every reader on a dream cruise across exotic waters to the harbor of dreams come true. In fact, Downs calls his cruise EVERYMAN'S dream; for who has not, when life was young, sailed in imagination, if not in reality, these same waters? I, for one, have had that dream, but it has remained a dream. But in his book, A SHOAL OF STARS, Hugh Downs has shared with me his dream, and in that way, although vicariously, he has made it my dream.

This lady said, "If my children were old enough, I don't know whether I would send them to college or not, what with all that's going on there nowadays." Maybe she has a point, for colleges have become less a place of learning and thoughtful study than a hotbed of unrest, dissension and kooky high-jinks. Some lay the blame on the generation gap, that we just don't understand the kids of today. But in that case the chasm between the generations is more than a gap—it comes nearer being a Grand Canyon. There has always been some antics and kicking up of the heels on college campuses, but mostly contained within the limits of rough fun and practical joking. Never before have the college campuses become scenes of orgies of defiance of constituted authority, both institutional and municipal. The sad part of the whole business is, all this ruckus is caused by a kooky minority. Most students go to college to study—if they are allowed to.
