There really was a man on the Moon,
To see what he could see.
There wasn't a lot, so he left the spot,
'Tis a pity there wasn't a SHE.

Well, the anxiety is over until the next time, then I suppose we'll all stayed glued to the TV again. Perhaps the quotation is right when it was said "What Fools We Mortals Be." Just the same, I can't see how our government can spend all this money on exploration when so many millions are needed for medical research. Seems as though it would be better to conquer Cancer before we conquer the Universe.

I can't help but describe the analogy or the wonder of it all when I think about the very intricate perfection of the Humming Bird's nest and two baby Humming Birds which the children of Dr. Dees found in the woods this past week. To all who have seen this small nest of birds, it presents just as much of a mystery as the Man in the Moon. It's almost unbelievable to see how perfect the nest was built on a tree limb, not showing where the limb ended and the nest began. The nest seems quite pliable and stretches with the growth of the tiny birds. Mrs. Dees feeds the fledglings with a mixture of honey and water, from a syringe and in order to get their attention for feeding, she blows gently over their heads, perhaps just as the mother bird must do with her wings. The birds are growing steadily and now the question arises, what happens next?

As much as I particularly dislike air conditioning, I'll admit it has its merits, for this past week has been a "doozie." I go in and out of the cool room, standing as much as I can of being confined, then I go outside to get heated up again. To be outside, with my feet on the ground is more than a privilege—it's wonderful!

Well, the fishing is definitely nil these days, I suppose on account of the hot weather. Reckon the fish have found their type of air conditioning somewhere else in the water. However, last Wednesday afternoon Helen and Tommy Jackson took me rock fishing out in the Sound, and all I can say, it was wonderful! Helen and Tommy's boat lets one fish in comfort, where as fishing in a skiff is fun, but sometimes the seat gets hard and one's back needs a "leaner." However, I like fishing any way I can get it and, yes, we did catch fish — seven nice rockfish.

Here's a recipe for Conga Bars, which someone asked me to again put in this column:

- 1½ sticks butter or oleo.
- 1 box light brown sugar.
- 3 eggs (well beaten).
- 2 cups self-rising flour.
- 1 tsp cinnamon.
- 1 tsp. cloves.
- 1 pkg. chocolate chips.
- 1 cup chopped nuts.
- 1 tbsp. water.

Cream butter and sugar, add well-beaten eggs, water, then mixed dry ingredients. Pour in greased pan and cook one hour at 350 degrees. Cut in squares and serve. Very good!

A Few Hints

A dull overcast day is better for washing windows. Sunshine dries sudsy water quickly and leaves dull streaks on the windows.

Try cucumber peelings, cut into thin strips, as an effective exterminator for ants and crickets.
