

BROAD STREET BULLETIN...

By Kate

I took another trip into a dream—
Some may call it reality,
But pain mixed with sleep and dreams
Made one realize the locality.

However once again I've returned
To the place I know as home—
There's no more dreams; no more pain
Just happiness with loved ones alone.

So many things happen so fast that it's hard to keep track of time and tragedy. In my own life I've known happiness at its highest delight and deep tragedy. My own dear mother told me many times that "This, too, shall pass away." It did, time and time again. Only God can sustain us in grief. I know He walks beside us every day, so do not be afraid.

I wish I could thank each nurse and doctor personally for their kindness and service "beyond the call of duty." I'm sure heaven must be full of nurses and doctors especially.

My own folks here at home, too, are really responsible for all my many comforts and their prayers have really brought me home. Many times I've been told what a fine man Buff is—I know it now, too—in fact he's the finest.

Have any of you seen an Evening Grosbeak this season? We had a call from Maryland, where there was 14 inches of snow and the Grosbeaks had arrived. We watch our feeders each day for the first ones.

Mrs. Nell (John) Taylor sent me this beautiful poem,
