

BROAD STREET BULLETIN...

By Kate

It's good to see an old friend,
When you're feeling sort of blue,
A friend who's just the same today,
As yesterday and tomorrow, too.

She will listen to your heartaches,
And help the best she can.
Perhaps she'll say a little prayer,
According to God's plan.

For God gives us true blue friends,
As through our life we trod,
But we must be a good friend, too,
With a firm belief in God.

Friendship means so much to me, especially since I've been ill. The prayers, visits and telephone calls came so many times when I needed them most. So take a chance, call that friend when you think of it. A cheerful "Hi" means a lot.

One of my favorite young people graduated from Medical School at the University of North Carolina Monday. I know Alex Kehayes will make an excellent doctor. He is kind and considerate to everyone and is as interested in the old as well as the young. But considering he's the son of Toni and Ernest Kehayes, it's no wonder he's such a nice person.

The following I'll share with you, as it is typical of a Mama's life:

FRUSTRATION

You make the beds and people come along and sleep in them.
You clean the oven and then have broiled steaks for dinner.

You buy a "drip dry" dress so you won't have to go to the laundry and the bathroom gets wet. You mop the floor and the mop gets wet. You wring the mop and your hands get wet. You wipe your hands on the towel—and you have to do the laundry anyway.

You wash the dishes and put them away and somebody says it's time for lunch. You iron a shirt and someone wears it.

You threaten to slit your throat and somebody reminds you that it is unwise because we're having turkey for supper and who's gonna wash the knife?

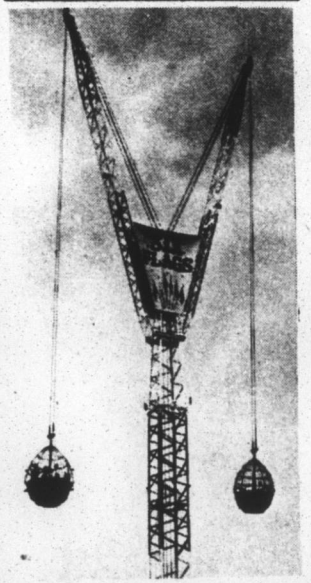

IT IS satisfying to do something for somebody!

A Few Hints

If you use a wooden salad bowl, wipe it clean with a paper towel. Then go over the inside with a piece of bread which will absorb most of the wood.
A salt solution helps banish blood and meat juice stains.

Improbable things which keep on happening: Pouring one's heart out; floating a loan and seeing eye to eye.
