

Around Chowan County Farms

We will have a farm tour, looking at research plots in Chowan County, on Thursday, August 26. This tour will start at 1:30 at Ray Byrum's farm in front of Earl Smith's store. Dr. Campbell has a mite test on peanuts and he will be with us to discuss the research that he has done on mites. At 2:00 we go to G. P. Bass's farm to look at cotton. We will look at Dimilin which is for control of boll weevils and Glenn Toomey's nitrogen plot. Dr. Ganyard and Murray Goodwin will discuss this stop. At 2:35 we will go to Thomas Paul Griffin's farm on highway 17 south. We will look at a landplaster test conducted by Astor Perry. At 3:20 we will go to Hayes and look at a peanut plot on pod rot and southern stem rot. J. C. Wells, Extension Pathologist, will discuss this plot. At 3:45 on Hayes we will look at some new chemicals on peanut grass and weed control. Some of these materials on the pod rot and grass control are working on labels and we feel that these two plots might be of real interest in the future. At 4:15 we go to Robert Bunch's farm on highway 32 south to look at corn varieties. We believe that this test will be of real interest to you.

All of these stops will be conducted by research people showing materials that will probably be labeled in many instances and used, or varieties that we will be planting, for years to come. We believe that this is a real opportunity for you to see research here on a local basis that is applicable to those of us in Chowan County and we certainly hope that you will attend.

MONSTER MELONS—Asa Griffin's monster watermelons are a tradition in Chowan County, and each summer he displays a few of the largest. Last Friday morning grandsons Brent, left, and Neal did the honors, stopping on South Broad Street to present this year's stand. Shown in the foreground are three good examples of Griffin's summertime hobby. Although at the time of the photo, none of the watermelons had been weighed, it is common for many of them to well exceed 100 pounds.

READING WORKSHOP—Seven teachers and 16 aides were involved in a two day Reading Program Workshop held at Holmes High School this week. The program was administered by Mrs. Peggy McGee, a doctoral student and graduate teaching assistant at UNC-CH. She is recognized across the state as one of the top people in the field of remedial reading. During the workshop, remedial lab personnel handled organization, and management of labs as well as characterizing the remedial reader and looking into the types of reading materials appropriate for the program. The reading labs, to be established in each of the county's five schools, will serve a total of 485 students and is funded by the ESEA Title I project and the ESAA Pilot Project.

Social Security Administration

People who don't report changes in circumstances that affect their supplemental security income payments may have a penalty deducted from future payments.

The supplemental security income program makes monthly payments to people with little or no income and limited resources who are 65 and over or blind or disabled. Eligibility for payments and payment amounts can be affected by changes in income, place of residence, marital status, and other circumstances.

People have 30 days to report such changes to any social security office. Under the law, failure to report changes - or delay in reporting changes - can mean reductions in supplemental security income payments.

The penalty is $25 for the first failure or delay, $50 for the second, and $100 for each subsequent failure or delay.

The penalty isn't applied if people couldn't help reporting late or weren't at fault for not reporting changes in their circumstances.

People who make a false statement that causes them to get money not rightfully due may be prosecuted for fraud.

Anyone getting supplemental security income payments can get information about reporting changes in circumstances by calling or writing any social security office.

The Elizabeth City Social Security Office is located at 111 Jordan Plaza. The phone number is 338-2161. The office is open from 9 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Monday through Friday.
