Senator Robert Morgan Reports to $75 from his paycheck up to a maximum figure of $2,700. The government would then match the paycheck deduction with twice the amount, with the total of both contributions not to exceed $8,300. There is a provision that calls for the program to be evaluated after five years.

The new bill, while it increases rather generously the payments to those who are now under the program, will result in substantial savings during the next five years. Also in the new law, there are tighter safeguards that are designed to cut down abuses. And while the GI Bill has not been cheated on to the extent that Medicaid has, there have been some abuses.

Under the new law, schools will have to report in more detail to the Veterans Administration. The reports must include a student's attendance record and indicate whether he is passing a course or failing it.

There was little opposition to this measure in the Senate, where it was passed by a voice vote. The feeling there was that the government should support veterans who leave the service and who want help in continuing their education, but that the government par-ticipate generously, but not forces justifies asking that foot the whole bill.

DOWNTOWN DEMONSTRATION—Cloggers and square dancers paused in Saturday's Peanut Festival parade to give a demonstration in the downtown area. Hundreds of spectators crowded into the street to watch the performers.
