

Parents Initiate STEP

Parents and grandparents alike often refer to "the good old days" when life seemed more simple and everyone's role was more clearly defined. There was an atmosphere of peace and order in the era of "Father knows best" and "Do what your mother says".

But times have changed, and people have changed, affecting changes in relationships between people. Concerned and sometimes bewildered by the effects which times and social changes have had on family relationships, today's parents are showing an increasing interest in finding more effective ways of relating to their children.

Thirty-seven mothers and fathers at White Oak School have recently organized into a new parent group called STEP, a program of Systematic Training for Effective Parenting. The program, which is designed to help parents relate to their children more effectively, is a training course for those who want their relationship with children to be more satisfying.

Beginning January 10, 1977, the course at White Oak will run for nine weeks. Because of the parented response to the organization of STEP, three one-hour sessions will be held weekly - two on Monday nights and one on Thursday mornings.

Using parent handbooks and correlated audio-visual materials put out by the American Guidance Service, Inc., parents will read, discuss, and share their child rearing experiences with each other.

Ginny Summers, ESAA guidance counselor at White Oak, originated the idea for this parent effectiveness training program and will lead the sessions. She stated that "coming to STEP meetings does not suggest inadequacy as parents, but indicates a desire to grow. She added, "People are recognizing the importance of learning new procedures for raising children in order to have more satisfying relationships."

Christmas is reaching the stage where it's an ordeal to practically everyone but the children, yet we enjoy the ordeal.
