

POETRY CONTEST WINNERS UNIQUELY ANNOUNCED—The contest was fun, and four students won. All-terrain poetry was the creative aim for all Junior High students, just the same. "Trick or Treat" candy was the prize for 1st Charles Ledford; 2nd Al Woodlee; 3rd Bill Hichard and 4th Martha Scott Harless, who were wordy wise. D.F. Walker is very proud and very loud in praise of the four imaginative students pictured in the crowd. Pictured on the back row, against whom there're no grudges are Mrs. Rita Carver, Doug Ashton and Mrs. Beni Williams—teachers and judges.

The 'Devil's Brigade'

Benefit Mischief

By GLORIA JONES
This Halloween, when the evil is up to no good, the Devil's Brigade at N.C. State University will be ossessed with brotherhood. The "Devil's Brigade," a group of six students, will lead the mischief and merry-making at a ball to benefit children around the world.

The first annual Masquerade Benefit Ball will be held Monday at 9 P.M. at the University Student Center for students and the general public.

Residents of Alexander Hall, NCSU's international residence who are organizing and sponsoring the ball, want to show they are by raising money to donate to the United Nation's Children's Fund and the United Way of Wake County.

They include 115 students from North Carolina and other states and 55 students representing 17 foreign countries.

Thomas McDermott, Alexander Hall's adviser, envisions the event in a broad sense.

"This experience," he says, "not only teaches the students to have a social consciousness, but it also provides them with an educational experience."

"The students are learning how to organize and carry out a project. They are also learning to think about and discuss world problems."

McDermott says the students are learning how to motivate others to become involved, and finding out that concerted action can get things done.

Kathleen McGuire of Greensboro, a member of the Devil's Brigade, expressed her delight at the opportunity the event has provided to meet Chancellor Joab Thomas and other University officials.

Members of the brigade will judge and award prizes for the best costumes at the ball.

Juan Abogabir, a freshman in textiles from Chili and a former professional disc jockey, will emcee the ball which will feature magic, music and snacks.
