Group Honors

Mrs. Bemby

Daisy N. Bemby, home economics teacher at Chowan High School, has been recognized as Regional Home Economics Teacher of the Year by the Northeastern Regional Home Economics Association. The organization represents 15 counties.

The Home Economics Teacher of the Year Award is based on an innovative program implemented during the year.

Her subject was family life education in the area of foods and nutrition. Due to the rising cost of food, limited variety of tasting experiences, lack of student knowledge of food, Mrs. Bemby developed a project that inspired students. Parents were involved in making comments on students home projects. They also took part in saving food cartons, bottles, bags for consumer study in class.

As a result of the project parents and other family members were able to share food cooked at home by the students. The project helped promote consumer awareness and wise selection in the market place.

Her co-workers have said, "Her personal and professional qualities have endeared her to all persons, both young and old, with whom she has contact."

Professionally, she has served as president of Northeastern Regional Home Economics, and chairman of the Membership Committee. Currently, she is second vice president of the Chowan County Extension Homemakers Association and is a member of Paradise Road Extension Homemakers Club. She was vice president and on many committees in the Northeastern District Association of Extension Home Economists.

She has been a teacher at Chowan High School since 1974. Prior to that time she was Home Economics Extension Agent in Chowan County and has held teaching positions in Nash, Perquimans, and Beaufort counties. She is a graduate of Shaw University in Raleigh.

She and her husband, Robert, reside on Paradise Road. She is a member of Providence Baptist Church.
