ECAS Award Ceremony

"If you don't have a head start, you just have to run more diligently," Dudley Flood, N. C. assistant superintendent of schools, Division of Student Services, told Edenton-Chowan Alternative School students last Thursday.

Flood spoke at an awards ceremony for two ECAS graduates, Gloria Boyce and Johnny Copeland, who will receive their diplomas from Chowan High School in June.

"I see young people in North Carolina every day who don't believe they can do something because of where they were born or because of their race, or because of who their daddy is, but that's just not acceptable," Flood told the group of approximately 65 students, faculty and guests.

The theme of Flood's address was what you do with what you have. He told the students the two foremost elements of success in life were having a goal and believing in yourself.

"The reason most people don't achieve is because they don't believe they can," he said.

Following his address, the floor was opened for student questions. Asked how he felt about alternative schools and ECAS in particular, Flood responded that of the 69 alternative schools in the state, ECAS was the best.

He said the school's flexibility, continuity and support from the total school system were responsible for his favorable impression of the Edenton-Chowan Alternative School and that he envisions a day when all schools will be set up on an alternative situation.

Flood, a former teacher and principal, served as director of the Division of Human Relations of the State Department of Public Instruction immediately prior to assuming his present position.

In addition to rendering consultant services to all 145 North Carolina school districts, Flood has conducted educational seminars and workshops for more than 250 groups in 41 of the 50 states, including Alaska and Hawaii, in Canada and in the District of Columbia.

Flood was in Edenton to be guest speaker and assist in the installation of Chowan High School's PTA officers for the new year.

Students Hold An Easter Rockathon

Through the pouring rain, high winds and (finally) sunbathing temperatures the 10th annual Easter Seals Rockathon continued in front of the Franklin County Courthouse. The perseverance of the Louisburg College Christian Life Council eventually raised $2,701 as 40 students helped collect the money from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. on April 4-7 in bright yellow buckets from passing motorists.

This year's total was $200 over their goal of $2,500 and overshadowed last year's total of $2,375.

"Somehow we've always reached our goal and exceeded it. This is our biggest yet, so I'm worried about whether we'll make it or not," conceded Sidney Stafford, faculty adviser of the CLC, last week before the Rockathon. But he had little to worry about even though it rained and the winds blew hard.

Phylis Herndon, the sophomore CLC Chairman from Durham ricked for four days inside a metal shed constructed to keep her dry.

Rusty Barath, a sophomore from Edenton, did a fine job as the Overall Chairman according to Stafford. This year there was more student help (40 as opposed to 31 in 1978) and 21 honorary rockers who donated a few minutes of their time. These rockers came from all walks of life — college faculty and staff, town officials, merchants and citizens.

The Christian Life Council has sponsored the Rockathon for the last 10 years and has raised $16,550 during that time. The funds collected go to the Pine Valley Chapter of the Easter Seals Society. This chapter serves Franklin County and eight other counties in North Carolina.

Stafford expressed thanks to all those who donated money, to student workers and the rockers. He also thanked MacDonalds for lunches to the Overall Chairman and Rocker, the coverage of local news media, Mrs. O'Neal for her telephone and the county commissioners for allowing the CLC to set up on the courthouse square.
