

Letter To The Editor

I would like to commend and congratulate the organization which sponsored the Chowan County Fair. I visited the fair on Thursday night, along with a mother and five small children. The children had a wonderful time on the kiddie rides, eating popcorn and cotton candy.

The girls who manned the rides were very concerned about the little children. They did everything they could to insure the safety of the little ones.

While we were there, we saw no drinking, we heard no profanity, and saw nobody who acted in any way except in a gentlemanly fashion.

The whole thing was organized well. The entrances and exits were not only marked with signs, but had men stationed there to steer us to a parking place. No delays whatsoever in getting in and out.

It was really a pleasure to visit your fair and see everything carried out in a clean and orderly manner.

And another thing, I struck luck since I am over 65 - I was admitted free of charge! Thank you very much.

Respectfully yours,
Grace M. Coston

Tree Planting Statistics

The South's forest industry planted a record 629,370,683 pine and hardwood seedlings during the 1978-79 planting season according to statistics compiled by the Southern Forest Institute. The S.F.I. report notes that 54,159,354 seedlings were planted in North Carolina.

Residents of Chowan County and Eastern North Carolina played an important role in the record planting season. Weyerhaeuser Company planted more than 15,000,000 trees on its own lands and lands of private, non-industrial owners. These trees were all planted within a 100-mile radius of Plymouth and New Bern, 29 per cent on non-company, privately owned lands.

The company's Tree Farm Family, with a membership in excess of 500 individual landowners, was instrumental in planting 4,394,000 trees on more than 5000 acres. These trees were all planted in Eastern North Carolina and amounted to more than 20 per cent of the total acres planted on private lands in North Carolina this past planting season. The Tree Farm Family is a cooperative association of private, non-industrial forest landowners and Weyerhaeuser Company. Tree Farm Family foresters advise and assist landowners in their forest management endeavors. There is no charge to the landowners for this assistance.

Although records were made during the recently completed planting season, Southern Forest Institute officials are quick to note that this is not enough to meet the double demand for wood and paper products projected for the year 2020.

"Consumers should be concerned with productivity on independent lands owned by farmers, factory workers, businessmen and housewives-some two million individuals owning 75 per cent of the 200 million acres of commercial forestland in the South," says Don Smith, S.F.I.'s director of forest resources.

He adds, "Tree planting efforts on the 18 per cent owned by industry is 'intensive' forest management. On the other hand, private, non-industrial lands-too often not managed-are producing at only half their potential."
