Vocational Ed.
Observance
Is Proclaimed

Proclaiming the week of February 9-14 as "North Carolina Vocational Education Week," Governor James B. Hunt, Jr. expressed the state's commitment to the idea that "vocational - technical education is an essential component of balanced growth and economic development." "If economic development is to continue, and if North Carolina's people are to benefit from it, plans must be developed today," Hunt observed. "Action must be taken to guarantee North Carolina's people have the education and skills to take advantage of new high-paying jobs."

The State Board of Education, joining in the Governor's call for action, has estimated that 85,000 students in North Carolina's secondary schools need and want vocational programs unavailable to them, in addition to the 285,000-plus students now being served. It is asking the General Assembly for additional funds to employ enough teachers to serve an additional 42,500 students each year of the biennium, as well for additional equipment and materials.

Injury Statistics Must Be Posted

"All North Carolina businesses, industries and public employers having more than 10 employees must display by February 1 an annual summary of on-the-job injuries, illnesses or deaths which occurred in their establishments during 1980," State Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks has noted. Brooks added that the summary, a portion of

OSHA Form 200, must be signed and posted until March 1 in the work area where notices to employees are customarily displayed. If no injuries, illnesses or deaths occurred last year, the employer must still sign and post the summary. Employers having 10 or fewer employees are exempt from OSHA recordkeeping requirements, unless they have been selected at random and notified a year in advance to participate in the annual OSHA statistical survey, Brooks said. The recordkeeping requirement is mandated by the 1973 Occupational Safety and Health Act of North Carolina. The law requires employers to retain OSHA Form 200 summaries for five years after the end of the calendar year they cover.

Inquiries concerning the posting requirement, or questions about OSHA Form 200, should be directed to Ann Yelvington, director, N.C. Department of Labor Research and Statistics Division, 4 W. Edenton St., Raleigh, NC 27601, (919) 733-4940.

'Jump Rope For Heart'

Fitness Program Is Initiated

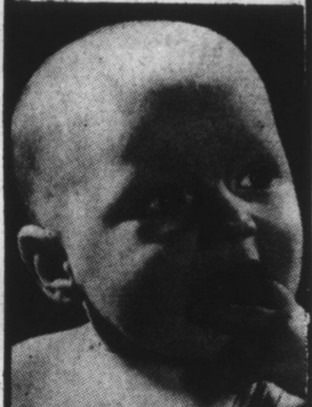

The Governor's Council of Physical Fitness and Health has endorsed "Jump Rope for Heart," a program of physical education for school students, which is sponsored by the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance, and the American Heart Association. Endorsement was announced by Robert S. Boal of Raleigh, council chairman, and William G. Gaaney, N.C. Department of Human Resources, council administrator. Physical educators have found that jumping rope helps to develop endurance, motor coordination, balance, and self confidence, as well as being a form of cardiovascular conditioning which can be continued through adulthood. In addition, the Jump Rope for Heart program encourages teamwork toward reaching a goal. In March, in conjunction with National Physical Education and Sports Week, young people in the program will give public demonstrations of skills and tricks which they have learned and will solicit contributions for these events as donations to their local Heart Funds. Last year, over 300,000 students from 2,900 schools in 39 states participated in Jump Rope for Heart. This is the first year for the program in this state, where it is sponsored by the N.C. Alliance for Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, and the American Heart Association, North Carolina Affiliate.

Lose Food Stamps

Student Eligibility Rescinded

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Recent changes in the Food Stamp Act have eliminated most college students from the food stamp program, a new U. S. Department of Agriculture report shows. Students now comprise only two-tenths of one per cent of the food stamp caseload. Under the Food Stamp Program Amendments of 1980, enacted by Congress last year, students were made ineligible for food stamps unless they have dependents, are elderly or disabled, or already work. The study shows that the new law has cut most students from the program. At one time, over 200,000 students received food stamps. Over half of all students remaining on the program are heads of households who support dependents. Most of these are single mothers supporting children with Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) while they attend school to gain skills that may enable them to get off welfare and into regular employment.
