INSIGHT INTO EYESIGHT

DR. A. F. DOWNUM, JR. OPTOMETRIST

SQUINTING

People who squint a lot probably need glasses. This is often a sign of nearsightedness. Nearsighted people who don't have glasses will squint to sharpen their focus when looking at something. It may solve the problem temporarily, but it can also cause eyestrain and headaches. And squinting doesn't do much for personal appearance.

Some adolescents tend to squint when they're growing up. By the time they are 20 or 21 many of them will realize that their nearsightedness is a problem that needs help. In some cases the nearsightedness will improve by then. Sometimes it gets progressively worse. But for most people, the degree of nearsightedness has reached a plateau by the time they're fully grown.

The problem may be in one eye or in both eyes. Only an eye examination can determine that. But with the proper glasses, "squinters" will have normal vision again and will no longer have to screw up their eyes to see clearly.

COTTON GROWERS TALK ABOUT VIKING SHIP CALCIUM NITRATE

"I like what fast-acting nitrate nitrogen and calcium does for my cotton"

Neely H. Robley Denmark, Tennessee

The results expressed by this testimonial reflect the grower's analysis of the effectiveness of Calcium Nitrate. Similar use by others may produce different results.

"We farm 1800 acres of cotton and used Calcium Nitrate for the first time in the Spring of 1977. Calcium Nitrate was applied as a sidedress at 150 lbs./Ac. We needed a fast-acting nitrogen and also liked the calcium CN provides. We noticed that there was reduced fruit shedding on cotton that had CN, and it helped the bolls to size better. I also like the way CN helps me control the crop's nitrogen level."
